Britain, France Rapped by U.S.

Times News Services

High-ranking U.S. state department officials today called the British and French votes during United Nations Security Council debate on the Mideast crisis Sunday "an outrage."

The United States vetoed a Security Council resolution, critical of Israeli raids on Lebanon and Syria, because the resolution did not include condemnation of the Arab terrorist acts which provoked the retaliatory attacks.

"It is unconscionable for the Western European allies to support the resolution," a top-level U.S. official said.

The belated denunciation of Britain and France — the veto was used Sunday night — is acknowledged by Nixon officials as part of a diplomatic arm-twisting aimed at toughening international efforts against air piracy and other terrorist acts.

Meanwhile, Lebanon's premier expressed fear Tuesday of a new Israeli attack as United Nations Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim called for General Assembly action against terrorism.

"From an evaluation of the situation we cannot say that last week's Israeli attack would be the last," Premier Saeb Salam told the Lebanese parliament.

His fears apparently were based on reports of continuing Israeli troop concentrations along Lebanon's southern borders and of new Israeli threats to strike at the Arab terrorists.

Salam said the Lebanese army has clear orders "to do the utmost to repel any Israeli aggression, at any price."

"We do not claim to have the power to deter Israel completely," he added, "but it is inconceivable not to repel an aggression."

Israeli planes attacked Palestinian positions in Lebanon and Syria last Friday in retaliation for the Olympics massacre in Munich Tuesday in which 11 Israelis, five Arab terrorists and a West German policeman were killed.

Premier Golda Meir told the Israeli parliament Tuesday that Israel will strike against Arab terrorists with all its strength and skill. With only the Communists abstaining, the legislators supported

Attack Ignored Life: Report

NEW YORK (WP) — New York State's official investigation of the revolt at Attica prison has concluded that the state almost callously disregarded human life in its handling of the uprising.

The investigating commission, appointed at the request of Gov. Nelson Rockefeller two weeks after he had approved using state troopers' firepower to reclaim the prison — one year ago today — criticized Rockefeller's role in the events.

The report's most chilling section is on the police action in reclaiming the prison from the rebellious inmates.

In 15 minutes of wild shooting, 39 persons were killed by the troopers, 10 of them state employees who had been held hostage by the inmates.

MASS CHAOS

The report describes mass chaos in the attack, including no communications between squad leaders and commanders, no way to tell men to stop firing and no clear directions on when to fire.

In the prison yard, says the commission's report, "troopers shot into tents, trenches, and barricades without looking first. In addition, even where the firing may have been justified ... the use of shotguns loaded with buckshot in the heavily populated spaces of D. yard led to the killing and wounding of hostages and of inmates who were not engaged in any hostile activity."

The nine-member investigation commission, which was headed by Dean Robert B. McKay of New York University Law School, said that "the major significance of this report may lie in the fact that it documents in considerable detail every aspect of the life and structure of a major prison, based upon more precise information than has ever before been assembled about any single institution ..."

The commission interviewed about 1,600 inmates, 400 prison guards, 270 state troopers, 200 national guardsmen and hundreds of others involved.

It found that the inmates' grievances were legitimate, in

THIS PERFORMANCE WORTH $300,000

MENTOR, Ohio (UPI) — Two men who gave faultless performances as Brinks' guards walked off with more than $300,000 Tuesday from a branch here of the Lake County National Bank.

The ruse became evident only when the real guards arrived an hour after the imposters had departed in what police said was an armored car.

They passed through a check-in procedure at which time their credentials and signatures were checked. Both appeared authentic, bank president Albert R. Pike said.

"The procedure was pretty much foolproof, we thought," Pike said.

Ten minutes later the two men pushed a cart loaded with six money bags containing more than $300,000 in currency from the bank to the parking lot and departed.

Branch manager David Gibb was in the bank along with 20 employees and about 15 customers at the time, but nothing the men did raised their suspicions.

"They conducted themselves like Brinks' guards would," Pike said.

Because they entered the bank by a rear windowless door, regularly used by Brinks, no one inside saw their getaway vehicle. But the FBI at Cleveland issued an alert for "an armored car, which may have been fraudulent or stolen."

The money was to have been moved to the Federal Reserve Bank at Cleveland. Pike said the amount, which was insured, was not unusually high for the bank.

Stanfield on Jobless While PM Talks Unity

Times News Services

A pitch for federalism and national unity and continued high employment were the springboards for the official launching of the Liberal and Progressive Conservative campaigns for the Oct. 30 federal election.

Nominations for the leadership of both parties were uncontested.

Prime Minister Trudeau in the Montreal riding of Mount Royal firmly rejected any thought of Quebec separation and made a strong pitch for federalism and national unity.

In Halifax, PC leader Robert Stanfield said in his nominating meeting that continued high unemployment was one of the basic reasons why the Trudeau government should be thrown out of office.

Meanwhile in Edmonton, New Democrat Leader David Lewis repeated his earlier contention that the system of grants and tax concessions to coporations is not working.

About 900 persons were on hand for Trudeau's nomination in Mount Royal.

Other business of Trudeau's first day on the campaign trail included a reception, again packed solid with well-wishers, and meetings with federal cabinet ministers in the Montreal area.

He was joined for the reception and the nomination meeting by Mrs. Trudeau. She looked uncomfortable in the crush of the reception and had to leave the stage while he was speaking at night because of the heat. She returned later.

Stanfield stressed in his nomination speech that within weeks of taking over the reins of government he would call a federal-provincial conference so that Ottawa and the provinces could "mutually" determine Canada's goals in directions for the future.

The opposition leader told a standing-room-only meeting of more than 1,200 persons that

Asians Protested

LONDON (UPI) — Police arrested 10 persons, including British neo-Nazi leader Colin Jordan, during a demonstration at London's Heathrow Airport Tuesday night protesting against the pending influx of Asians from Uganda. Witnesses said the arrests came after police ousted an estimated 300 demonstrators from one of the terminal buildings.

Stoppages Counted

OTTAWA (CP) — There were 106 strikes or lockouts in Canada during July, resulting in a loss of 1,162,030 man-days, the labor department reported today. Ontario was the scene of 35 of the stoppages. Quebec had 29 and British Columbia 17.

Kissinger Stays On

MOSCOW (AP) — Henry A. Kissinger remained in Moscow today for an extra day of secret talks with Kremlin leaders before flying to London and Paris.

Maggots to Rescue

GUELPH, Ont. (CP)—Maggots, a one-time medical remedy used to clean wounds, helped save the life of Denise Srayson as she lay pinned in the wreckage of a car for five days, Dr. G. L. Stewart, area coroner, said today. The maggots, swarming over the shattered face and limbs of the 37-year-old Maxwell, Ont., woman, prevented blood poisoning, Dr. Stewart said.

New Delhi Quiet

NEW DELHI (Reuter) — Police said New Delhi was quiet today after four days of riots. But several parts of the city remained under orders banning processions and assembly of more than five person.

Red Ships Barred From NATO Test

OSLO (Reuter) — Two Soviet ocean research vessels have been barred from entering a Norwegian harbor because of the imminent NATO exercise Strong Express in the North Atlantic, informed sources said.

The Soviet vessels, Fridtjof Nansen and Poisk, have been participating in a joint Soviet-Norwegian research program off the coast of Siberia.

They were to have anchored at Tromsoe, northern Norway from Sept. 11 to 15 to discuss research results with their Norwegian colleagues.

But the sources said Tuesday night the vessels have been refused entry by Norway's foreign ministry.

NATO commanders begin a 64,000-man military exercise aimed at restoring a strategic balance in the area.

The NATO exercise will include 300 ships and 700 aircraft taking part in combined land, sea and air operations in northern Norway.

The Canadian contingent taking part will consist of about 1,000 troops from the 3rd Battalion Royal Canadian Regiment in Petawawa, Ont., 3rd Battalion Royal Canadian Horse Artillery, Shilo, Man., and a detachment from 427 Tactical Helicopter Squadron, also in Petawawa.

Barrett Waits . . . And Waits

The Bennett government held its last cabinet meeting Tuesday afternoon and the premier is expected to resign soon.

Bennett refused to say when he will take the last trip to Government House, saying only that it will occur "before the end of the week."

He added that "I think, I'm sure" the changeover will take place before the end of the week.

Asked this morning if he will resign today, Bennett said: "Not this morning."

Pressed if the changeover might come later in the day, he said: "I wouldn't think so."

The first NDP caucus since the election is at 10 a.m. Saturday.

Barrett, who has often expressed disagreement with some of the traditions connected with Government House, is expected to have at least his cabinet ministers sworn in to office at the Legislative Buildings on Saturday.

Members of the Legislative Press Gallery were asked to prepare to show credentials before covering the events on the weekend.

Meanwhile, administrative wheels in the Bennett government continued to turn. A total of $594,832 in special warrants and other grants were dispensed and announced Tuesday in cabinet orders.

A $400,000 amount, issued by special warrant, goes to the UBC Asian Studies centre as a matching Ottawa grant for a library.

Two homes for the mentally retarded in the Vancouver area will receive a total of $88,832, also by special warrant, which means there was no legislative authority for the grant.

Under the Elderly Citizens Housing Aid Act another $108,000 was granted.

Study A-Power NDP Advised

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Atomic Energy of Canada president Lorne Gray says Premier-elect Dave Barrett should study the nuclear power plants of Ontario and Quebec before deciding for or against nuclear power for British Columbia.

"I advise Mr. Barrett to talk to the users, not the salesmen," Gray said in an interview this morning.

He was in Victoria to address a Victoria Chamber of Commerce luncheon.

"He (Barrett) shouldn't take my word for it—naturally, I am biased in favor of nuclear power—nor should he listen to Mr. Keenleyside."

On Tuesday, Dr. Hugh Keenleyside, issued a dissenting stand against the nuclear power plant urged for Vancouver Island by the majority of the B.C. Energy Board.

Gray said that Barrett, or his resources minister, should spend some months studying nuclear power installations at Pickering, Ontario, and other eastern plants.

Gray said he was confident the study would convince the incoming New Democratic government it should begin discussions by the end of 1973 aimed at construction of a nuclear power plant for Vancouver Island to open about 1981.

He said it need not necessarily be constructed at either Duncan, favored by energy board chairman Gordon Shrum, nor at Nanaimo, urged by the Nanaimo Chamber of Commerce.

"It might be worthwhile to look at sites on the west coast of the island. It would be no problem to construct transmission lines from the west coast."

Gray earlier conducted a study of possible sites for a nuclear power plant near Nanaimo and urged construction of a plant there if the citizens and government want it.

He said the desires of the local citizens should be the main consideration in selecting a site.

Screams Disrupt Fire Death Probe

MONTREAL (CP) — The opening of an inquest into the fire that killed 37 persons and injured 53 others at the downtown Blue Bird Cafe Sept. 1 was disrupted minutes after it began today.

Giles Eccles, 24, being held in connection with the blaze, had just been escorted into the courtroom flanked by two police guards when a man and his wife ran towards the witness box yelling "I'll kill you, you bastard."

The man's wife screamed "no, no" and tried to restrain her husband. He was quickly overpowered by police and removed from the courtroom.

Other spectators remained quiet during the incident.

Eccles is being held on a coroner's warrant as a material witness while Marc Boutin, 24, and James O'Brien, 22, are being sought across Canada.

Flowers Greet Northern Reds in Seoul

By DON OBERDORFER
The Washington Post

SEOUL — With flowers, music and beautiful girls, with a million people watching, waving and applauding along the roadside, and with a lantern-lit reception in a ceremonial hall of the ancient kings, South Korea Tuesday welcomed the first North Koreans to openly enter this city since the armed invasion of 1950.

The welcome was part diplomacy, part one-upmanship and part sincere emotion. But whatever the motives and the methods, this latest chapter in the modern Korean story has given rise to considerable optimism. Both sides expressed the hope that it will lead to further steps on the long road back from enmity, division and war.

In a richly-decorated hotel ballroom this morning, officials of the Communist North and the anti-Communist South sat down to further talks about reunion of divided families and eventual reunification of this bitterly-divided country.

Little certifiable progress and few if any hard agreements are expected in this week's public encounter, the second round in Korean Red Cross-sponsored talks which opened late last month in Pyongyang, the capital of the North.

In this case, however, the tone is almost as important as the substance. And so far, the tone is surprisingly cordial in the light of all that has gone before.

Just before 10 a.m. Tuesday, the 54-member North Korean delegation crossed the now-misnamed "Bridge of No Return" at Panmunjom and headed south through the demilitarized zone for their five-day visit across the line, led by Kim Tae Huk, a short, portly, broadly-grinning diplomat.

The visitors were greeted by the southern counterparts they had met two weeks ago in Pyongyang. There was much handshaking, some laughing and something of the air of a slightly stiff family reunion. Lee Bum Suk, a tall South Korean diplomat turned Red Cross executive, played host.

After preliminary remarks in a hopeful vein and the presentation of clusters of pink flowers by pigtailed schoolgirls, the two delegations left in Cadillacs, Toyotas and air-conditioned buses on the 28-mile journey on the newly refurbished "Unification Highway" to Seoul.

Only 10 American military men were on duty at the DMZ, many fewer than usual, and they were under strict instructions to stay out of sight. American military slogans blazoned on former U.S. camps near the front had been taken down or painted over. Although 43,000 U.S. troops remain in South Korea, the northern visitors saw hardly any of them.

The people of tiny villages and small towns near the highway gathered at the roadside. At the outskirts of Seoul, beyond anti-tank barriers erected against northern invaders, the crowds became larger. In the city itself throngs of men, women and children lined the streets.

Some of the onlookers, born in the North, expressed the fervent hope they would soon be able to contact long-lost family members. Others said they had come because this was an important day in the life of the nation.

As the visitors' motorcade rolled through the centre of the city, there was spontaneous applause from many people and friendly waves from most of the rest.

Local leaders had passed the word to the public to be friendly but not enthusiastic. It was widely noted that the citizenry of the North paid only minimal attention to the southern visitors to Pyongyang, and the South Koreans had determined to show a friendlier face.

board's report, which was released Monday.

He said it makes sense to use all hydropower sources possible before moving into the field of thermal power.

However, when the time comes that dams are considered for major rivers like the Fraser, then the provincial government should move into thermal power instead.

"And nuclear power is the best thermal source," he said.

In his speech to the chamber, Gray said there had been "much emotional but uninformed thinking and writing" on the question of safety at a nuclear power plant.

"As far as I know, no person has ever been killed or injured or even affected by the nuclear aspects of any operating nuclear power plant anywhere in the world."

He said any type of thermal plant will have the problem of dumping heated water but rather than injuring the marine environment it might produce beneficial effects.

"Radiation emissions from a nuclear plant are sometimes detectable by a very sensitive instrumentation but no effect on the environment from the radiation emitted by any operating nuclear power plant has ever been detected.

"A hypothetical person living at the boundary of a plant (constantly discharging maximum permissible releases), drinking effluent (if it were fresh water), eating fish caught in the discharged cooling water every day, would receive half the additional radiation that he would if he moved from Victoria to Banff, due to the higher altitude," he said.

"Everyone is subjected to natural radiation many times stronger than from a nuclear power plant and it has never proved harmful. Like sunlight, too much can be harmful but some may be essential."

Gray said that nuclear power plnts are less expensive to build than corresponding hydro-electric plants but are more expensive to construct than other thermal structures.

"The higher initial investment in nuclear plants must be and is offset by much lower fuelling costs than are possible from fossil fuels," he said.

"We have done some arithmetic between comparisons of nuclear power versus gas-fired power and, although the amount of the difference can be argued, we are satisifed that there is a difference, and nuclear power costs would be lower today here on the island and will be still lower 20 years from now."

Natural gas, he said, is too valuable to use in the generation of electric power.

The Nanaimo chamber has been urging construction of a nuclear plant there at an estimated cost of $175 million.

In an effort to put the best foot forward, the streets and roadways along the visitors' route were washed and swept by government employees and schoolchildren, new shrubs were planted and some anti-Communist signs eliminated.

With government approval, the South Korean Red Cross recruited several dozen of the most beautiful girls in the country to do their duty as temporary hostesses, among them television stars, models and Korean airline stewardesses.

Wearing miniskirts, filmy dresses or other alluring garb, the girls were hostesses on the North Korean buses in the motorcade and at the glittering party Tuesday night at the Kyongbok palace, the traditional reception hall of the Korean Yi dynasty royalty.

On one side of the outdoor pavilion, musicians with traditional robes and traditional instruments played court music of the Korean kings, alternating with waltz strains and other modern music from a Seoul symphonic group.

There was much mixing and friendly chatter. Yoon Ki Bok, vice-director of education of the Communist party of North Korea, discovered he had gone to high school with Shin Hyung Shik, a South Korean national assemblyman, and they remembered skating together in their early days.

Wearing red Kim Il Sung buttons on their suitcoats in tribute to their leader, some of the North Koreans said they considered the pretty girls to be examples of American-influenced decadence.

Others professed to be unimpressed with the burgeoning skyline and bustling activity of Seoul, saying that Pyongyang may be less busy but is more orderly.

Nearly all who would express themselves, however, had good words for the reception of the South Korean people on the streets of the city.

Foam Cushions Landing

DAYTON, Ohio (UPI) — An American Airlines Boeing 707 with 80 passengers and a crew of four aboard made a forced landing at Wright Patterson air force base early today after part of its landing gear system malfunctioned.

Three passengers were treated at the base hospital for minor injuries, including a broken hand. Paul Cobb national urban affairs co-ordinator for Democratic presidential nominee George McGovern was one of the passengers but was not injured.

The plane was on the last leg of its Los Angeles to Chicago and Detroit route when Capt. Dale Cummings said a red light flashed on the instrument panel indicating the nose landing gear would not go down.

The airport control tower told Cummings he could not land at Detroit because of poor visibility which was the last scheduled stop for the airliner and he was advised to fly on to greater Cincinnati airport at Florence, Ky., 260 miles to the south.

The plane was diverted back to Wright Patterson, 55 miles to the north, when Cincinnati airport officials told Cummings they did not have enough time to foam the runway.

U.S. Air Force ground crews foamed 5,000 feet of a runway 24 feet wide at Wright Patterson in 25 minutes while the plane circled the base.

The plane landed, braking hard with the main landing gear lowered but the landing gear in the nose still up.

The passengers, including three babies, were taken to Cox municipal airport here for the flight to Detroit.

the main, and that the inmates had tried to work within the system to correct them to no avail. It found pervasive institutional and personal racism within the prison.

"That the explosion occurred first at Attica," said the report, "was probably chance. But the elements for replication are all around us. Attica is every prison; and every prison is Attica."

Before its detailed description and analysis of what happened at Attica between Sept. 9 and 13, 1971, when a total of 43 persons lost their lives, the commission expressed despair with the entire American system of dealing with lawbreakers, saying:

"Prison is the end of the criminal justice line — for inmates, for supervisory personnel, and for members of the public who have conveniently forgotten the institutions to which they abandon their most difficult fellow citizens."

"the government's right to defend its emissaries and citizens wherever they may be."

The UN chief told a news conference in New York that the United Nations "cannot be a mute spectator" to increasing violence. But he acknowledged that any anti-terrorism resolution will face difficulties in the 27th General Assembly convening Tuesday.

Waldheim said it is up to the assembly to find measures to deal with the kidnapping and killing of diplomats and increasing acts of terror in the world. Acting on his own initiative, he submitted a proposal last Friday that the 132-nation assembly take action.

The Soviet Union and China vetoed attempts in the 15-nation Security Council Sunday to link the Munich slayings to the reprisal strikes Israel conducted against Syria and Lebanon. The United States then vetoed a resolution calling for a Middle East ceasefire but making no mention of terrorism. Britain and France voted for this resolution, and high-ranking U.S. state department officials termed their action an "outrage."

Foreign ministers of the 10 European Common Market countries met in Rome and agreed to take a united stand on any proposal against terrorism put before the United Nations.

The West German government was busy trying to repair the damage done to its relations with Arab governments by the German anger over the Munich attack.

And Gen. Moishe Dayan, Israeli defence minister, left Montreal for New York late Tuesday after a visit of slightly more than 12 hours during which tight security measures were in effect.

Gen. Dayan gave two speeches on behalf of the Combined Jewish Appeal and the Israel Emergency Fund but both were held behind closed doors.

The only information on what he said came from persons attending who relayed some of his comments to reporters.

They said there had been a 15-minute question-and-answer period and quoted the Israeli defence minister as saying the killing of the 11 Israeli athletes did not set back the prospects for peace in the Middle East because a peace agreement had not been imminent even before the massacre.

Gen. Dayan said terrorism by Arab guerrillas will continue and must be fought. Three prospects — peace, all-out war or a continuation of terrorism — face Israel, he said.

Heavy security was in evidence throughout Gen. Dayan's visit. RCMP officers carrying rifles were seen roving Montreal International a special El Al flight which Airport prior to his arrival on carried no regular passengers.

In Libya, a heroes' burial was given Tuesday to the Palestinian guerrillas who were shot by Munich police after they had killed their Israeli hostages.

The Middle East News Agency, in a dispatch from Tripoli, said the funeral of the five was a "majestic spectacle."

the priorities-for-tomorrow conference would loosen the federal straitjacket on fiscal arrangements so that the provinces themselves would have a greater deal of say in deciding how to spend tax money.

"We are going to emphasize tax sharing with the provinces and take the strings off grants so that the provinces themselves will be better able to meet their own priorities," he told a cheering crowd of avid party supporters in one of the hearts of Conservative country.

The Progressive Conservative leader, who had earlier spent more than one hour mainstreeting through Halifax's busy downtown business section, criticized, condemned and mocked Trudeau and his government, to the delight of his audience.

DDT Curbs 'Hasty'—Ecologist

VANCOUVER (CP) — Government restrictions on the use of DDT were imposed too hastily, Dr. Ken Lucas of Environment Canada said Tuesday.

Lucas, assistant deputy minister to Jack Davis, was speaking during a panel discussion on regulation of pesticides at the Canadian Agricultural Chemicals Association conference.

"Our recent experience with the restrictions imposed too precipitiously, I think, on the use of DDT, points out the need for increased collaboration among the various concerned agencies," he said.

"Believe it or not, there were detrimental consequences of the ban. It created problems for all concerned.

"For example, there was the dilemma of those voluntary private organizations who plunged immediately into the collection of DDT without any plan for disposing of the materials they collected.

"Even more troublesome was the stranding of stocks at all levels in the pipeline from formulator through to user.

"Many of these, plus multi-toxicant formulations, were in containers which were unsafe for shipping. We can't even move the damn stuff — it's stuck in somebody's shed," Lucas said.

"These factors should have been considered in advance and we hope they will be in future.

"We believe that the initial restrictions on DDT were imposed in an atmosphere highly charged with emotion, and without sufficient regard for the environmental consequences of such an action."

Virtually all uses of DDT were banned in the U.S. last June. But while the chemical is restricted in Canada, it may still be used under certain conditions.

Police Mediation Due This Week

The B.C. Mediation Commission will make recommendations in a few days for a new contract between Victoria and the policemen's union.

"A day or two or three at the most should do it," mediation commission chairman John Parker of Vancouver said today.

The commission, at the request of the city, held a hearing two weeks ago under a non-binding section of the Mediation Commission Act under which it can recommend terms for a new contract.

The decision would only be binding if both sides agreed in advance, which they haven't, said a city hall source.

The union has been seeking salary parity with Vancouver city and suburban Vancouver police forces.

In another dispute, no meetings have been scheduled by mediation officer Clark Gilmour since his appointment three weeks ago in the firefighters union-Victoria case.

City officials, however, were unavailable while the mediation commission hearing was in progress in Vancouver.

Gilmour's term has been extended until towards the end of the month. The firefighters union, like the police, has been seeking wage parity with Vancouver area fire forces.

B.C. Hydro Tries Battery-Powered Car

B.C. Hydro will participate in a continent-wide program which may lead to development of a practical electric battery road vehicle.

A Pennsylvania company Battronic Truck Corporation division of Boyertown Auto Body Works, has received an order for 100 electric service vans. One of them is for B.C. Hydro.

The program is designed to develop research and operating experience with electric battery vhicles.

Hydro chairman Gordon Shrum said the program could make an important contribution in the fight against air pollution for internal combustion engines.

The utility will use its electric van for inspection trips, deliveries and other uses involving short distances and frequent stops.

It will be mounted on a 91-inch wheelbase chassis with an interior height of 63 inches. It will be 12 feet long, 6½ feet wide and almost eight feet high.

PROJECT RECYCLE GETS 5 MORE DAYS

Project Recycle will remain open on a voluntary basis from Sept. 15 to Sept. 20, when it is hoped the Capital Regional Board will take over the depot.

The board's engineering department is conducting a feasibility study on continuing the project and a decision is to be announced next Wednesday.

Operating under an Opportunities for Youth grant since June 1, the project will run out of funds Sept. 15. Some of the volunteers say they will be able to stay on with the depot provided they can get more long-term funding.

"What we want is commitment, not money," said project member Bill Gerow.

"We'd like the engineers and experts who are already on salary to sophisticate the system and continue the education program."

Gerow said the main purpose of the program is public education. The end result of the project was to be a film on recycling, which will be sent to schools around the province.

The film is not finished yet, however, because the depot was such a success, workers have been spending all their time in the warehouse.

Pacific Press Talks Break Off

VANCOUVER (CP)—Talks between Pacific Press Ltd. and the six-union council of Pacific Press Newspaper Unions broke off Tuesday over the question of automation and staff displacment.

The council said it would apply for the assistance of a mediation officer to settle the dispute. The talks began Monday and only non-economic matters were under discussion.

The current contract expires Oct. 30. The company made no comment. Pacific Press owns The Sun and Province newspapers.

Women Electors Run Registration Desks

The Victoria Association of Women Electors will set up a voter registration desk for the December municipal elections at Eaton's department store next week.

The desk, at Eaton's Douglas Street entrance, will be open from 1 to 4 p.m. Mondays and 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Tuesdays until Sept. 23.

Power Saw Hurts Man

William McCall, 64, of 3214 Wordsworth, drove six miles to Victoria police station where two police officers took him to the hospital. McCall brought the severed finger with him.

Police said McCall was working alone on a construction job off Interurban Road in Saanich about 10 a.m. when the accident occurred. There was no phone in the area so he drove to the police station, knowing it wasn't far from the hospital.

Health Centres Pushed by Young

The concept of community health centres is one which should be pushed — and the pushing hopefully will be done by the new NDP government.

That is the belief of Art Young, chairman of the capital regional hospital board, who said today community health centres are a step in the right direction.

Young said community health centres, which would operate as mini-hospitals with day-care facilities, need support from the provincial government.

A government push might help the capital regional hospital board overcome local opposition to such a scheme, Young said, although he does not expect much "static" on the idea.

He hopes the concept will not be overlooked in the regional hospital referendum, expected to seek $20 million from taxpayers next spring.

Young said community health centres would not be an expensive proposition in the long run, because they would take pressure off acute care beds, which are costly items.

Power: How Much and What For?

Post-election release of the long awaited report of the B.C. Energy Board discloses facts and opinions regarding the power-generating future of Vancouver Island as well as the broader picture for the province. Although the report advocates nuclear power for the Island by 1981, it urges that there be no rush into this form of power supply until existing water power resources have been utilized, and further improvements in nuclear power generation have been realized. The report mentions additional development on Campbell River, at fairly high cost per kilowatt, and foresees use of the large Hat Creek coal reserves on the mainland if these are not required for more sophisticated purposes than thermal power plants.

Island residents will view the nuclear proposal with mixed feelings. Although many engineers depreciate the public's fears of nuclear pollution from the power plants, and its concern about the possible effects of heat delivered into adjacent bodies of water used for cooling purposes, there still remains a widespread uneasiness in regard to nuclear power generation. The process itself has been made relatively foolproof, but there still remains the question of disposal of nuclear waste.

The experience in some eastern areas of the U.S., as well as in Washington State, has not allayed these fears. The fact remains, that waste disposal on the scale which future proliferation of nuclear plants across North America will require has not yet been satisfactorily solved. More reassurance on this point will be needed if full public support is to be won.

One point which may occur to readers of dispatches based on the Board's report is the apparent assumption that Vancouver Island will be best served by development of power to the utmost extent possible. Importation of coal for thermal plants on the Island, use of natural gas to generate electricity, or resort to overhead transmission from the mainland, are all rejected for various reasons. This leaves maximum development of available river flows, and eventually nuclear power stations.

The engineers, of course, base their predictions on the expected demand for industrial and household power over the next couple of decades. There appears to be no thought that it might be advisable to halt industrial development or population before the ultimate maximum is reached — that, in short, there may be other uses for the Island which do not call for the utmost development of power.

This may be heresy in some circles, but uses of the environment alternative to industrial are finding increasing favor among many people today. The question is one of deciding what we want to do with the Island — or all of British Columbia, for that matter: whether we wish to make it a fully exploited area for the production of goods; or whether the recreational, sporting, educational mode of life, perhaps equally rewarding in revenue in the changing years to come, should be chosen.

That vital choice should not be left for the Energy Board to make. But tacit public acceptance of its report and the principles on which it is based will automatically make the decision in favor of power production and all that it implies. The choice should be made consciously and not by default, for in many ways it is the most important one before us.

Another Look at Crime

In a conference with reporters in Quebec City recently Mr. Maurice Saint-Pierre, director of the Quebec provincial police, disclosed the extent of the attempted spread of organized crime. "We have found," he said, "that organized crime has tried to infiltrate at the level of administration, be it business, be it newspapers, be it police, be it governments, be it municipal or civic authorities. They have tried and they will try, not always with success, but sometimes with success."

The director of the QPP would not say where crime had successfully broken in. He concluded his remarks by praising the formation of a public inquiry commission into organized crime in Quebec, to begin hearings shortly.

The causes of organized crime sometimes lie in the exploitation of age-old human inclinations — gambling, for example. Sometimes crime is a matter of fraud; sometimes it operates behind respectable "fronts." There is no simple answer to organized crime. Crime as pervasive as Mr. Saint-Pierre portrays may simply be an inevitable result of civilization — like rats or (in some theories) cancer.

Coming to grips with crime may, in short, require a knowledge of social development and psychology which is at present beyond our means. Public inquiries could, though, be a valuable weapon.

How Much and How Good?

Oil exploration off the East Coast of Canada has been chosen for study by the Science Council of Canada as a pioneering effort in "technology assessment." This kind of evaluation is an attempt to learn the cost and benefits, both direct and indirect, of newly applied technology and to improve the decision-making process of governments involved.

Projects like the Aswan Dam and the supersonic transport were not, it can be argued, fully assessed beforehand. In the case of Aswan, Mediterranean fishing has been adversely affected. As for the Concorde, there is continuing controversy about its long-range effects.

Sable Island development is the subject of debate between provincial and federal politicians, but the benefits possibly accruing to the Maritimes are not fully identified. The Sable Island case may set the pattern for development off the West Coast and in the Arctic seas.

The Canadian Science Council is moving into an area where the impartial voice of science will be welcome. Indeed, if procedures can be perfected, efficient assessment of technology could be one of the important spin-offs of this age.

Nailing a Shadow

HAROLD GREER

Premier Davis and the Press

TORONTO — He was as usual, late. He looked as usual, like a former college football star at the class reunion, freshly-scrubbed, nattily turned out in baby blue, the epitome of ruddy middle-age good health and of middle-class success.

But this time there was something missing. The easy smile, the confident manner, the superb sense of cool, were gone. The apple-cheeked face was tense, the monotone voice hesitant and, once or twice, cracky.

William Grenville Davis, Premier of Ontario, scion of the Tory Establishment, was in trouble and it showed. He had been in trouble before but he had always smiled and talked his way out of it, helped along by an obsequious press willing to accept anything he told them. This time he knew it was not going to be as easy.

Conflict of Interest

He had been ducking the press ever since he had returned from Europe three days before. Darcy McKeough, the provincial Treasurer and Minister of Everything, had resigned over disclosures of a conflict of interest and the press had some questions for the premier. But they went unanswered while he conferred with his ministers, and shadowy political advisers like Hugh Macaulay, the former car dealer of no fixed occupation, flitted in and out of the premier's offices.

Word had seeped out the day before that he would probably be issuing a statement and the press had said fine, but they also wanted to ask some questions and they weren't going to buy just a piece of paper. Then the word was he would only answer questions on the statement and that he would do it around 2 p.m. The press waited and the time was changed to 3:45 p.m. and finally at 4:03 p.m. he came into the press conference looking like a man who realized he might as well get it over with.

He did the best he could, playing with words as usual, but he didn't have much to work with.

He had that day, he announced, spoken with Mr. McKeough and informed him that he had, with great regret, accepted his resignation. This "decision" did not at all reflect on Mr. McKeough's personal integrity or imply misconduct. Instead, it was "the mutual recognition and achnowledgment of an administrative proceeding ... which represented, at worst, an error in judgment and which allowed, as a result, the possibility of an appearance of a conflict of interest."

It sounded good but hardly a word of it was true. McKeough had not offered to resign: he had quit flat out. His resignation was not up for acceptance or rejection, there was no "decision by the premier" to be made. But by talking as if there were, Mr. Davis apparently hoped to divert the reporters from the real issue.

Some of the reporters, however, were not to be diverted. Was it not correct, he was asked, that McKeough had detailed his possible conflict of interest to the premier on Aug. 26, two days before a newspaper had disclosed it? If so, what advice had the premier given him?

None, Mr. Davis replied. He had discussed the matter with Mr. McKeough but had indicated no reaction or response. "I was not prepared to make a judgment at that moment," he said. It was a "very fine line" as to whether Mr. McKeough had a conflict of interest or not and he had wanted to consider the matter rather than make a "30-second" judgment.

Mr. McKeough had merely held a financial interest in a Chatham land development company whose subdivision plans required Mr. McKeough's approval as minister. "Was that not so?" the reporters asked.

That, Mr. Davis replied, was one way of putting it. Could there be any doubt that it constituted a conflict of interest? Mr. McKeough's ministerial approval, Mr. Davis said, had been merely "an administrative proceeding." Did it not appear that the premier had given Mr. McKeough no advice because, at that time, the story had not broken in the newspapers? No, not at all. Mr. Davis claimed: "I have made my decision."

But what "decision" had he made? Mr. McKeough had quit: did the premier have any choice but to accept his resignation? That, Mr. Davis said, was one way of construing it. Was there any other way of construing it? Mr. Davis made no answer.

A reporter noted that the premier had given Attorney-General Dalton Bales no advice either when Mr. Bales informed him he had speculated in land now required by the government for Toronto's new international airport complex. Was that the kind of leadership to be expected from a premier? Mr. Davis said something about these problems' being more difficult than might appear.

Hard to Distinguish

Mr. Bales had offered his resignation but Mr. Davis had refused it. How had he distinghished between Mr. Bales and Mr. McKeough, if both of them made errors in judgment which led to "the possibility of an appearance of a confict of interest?".

It was very hard to make a distinction between the two cases, Mr. Davis agreed. He hoped that the guidelines on conflict of interest which the government was preparing would show where the line should be drawn. It was a very complicated matter.

Would Mr. McKeough perhaps be back in the cabinet some day? He had examined the precedents while in London, Mr. Davis said, and there was nothing he could discover to prevent Mr. McKeough's return to the government.

But if Mr. McKeough had made an error in judgment serious enough to cause him to resign, was that the kind of judgment to be expected of cabinet ministers? "We all make errors in judgment from time to time," Mr. Davis replied.

It all rather sounded, a reporter suggested, that Mr. McKeough was simply being put in purgatory for a while. "You will not get me saying it's a kind of purgatory," Mr. Davis replied.

JAMES RESTON

Not Quite Coming Across

WASHINGTON — Of the last five presidential elections, the Republicans have won three, mainly on foreign policy issues. Gen. Eisenhower won in 1952 and 1956, not only because he was immensely popular but because he was regarded as a man of peace and experience in the foreign field. Richard Nixon won in 1968 largely because of Vietnam, and this helps explain his strategy for re-election.

It has always been Nixon's contention that the way to beat the Democrats is to make foreign policy the presiding issue of the campaign, and though he is still trapped in the Vietnam war, he has been remarkably successful so far in keeping the larger questions of Russia, China, Japan and the Middle East in the headlines.

Kissinger to Moscow

Thus, his foreign policy adviser, Henry Kissinger, is off again to Moscow to talk about trade, peace in Vietnam, the tragedy in Munich, Middle Eastern negotiations and European security, with the Soviets. He may even get a chance to raise there the question of the Soviet Union's policy of demanding ransom from Jews emigrating to Israel, which will not hurt Nixon with Jewish voters in November, even if the Soviet leaders don't listen.

There is no evidence that Kissinger is taking any new Vietnam peace terms to Moscow, but the president is pressing the Soviets, the Chinese and Prince Sihanouk of Cambodia (now in Peking) to make one more effort in Hanoi for a cease-fire before the November voting. This is the one thing he needs to make his foreign policy not only the dominant but the decisive issue in the election.

George McGovern, on the other hand, is trying to make the domestic pocketbook issues dominant, and the surprising thing so far is that he has made little progress. He has plenty of ammunition for a traditional Democratic presidential campaign.

He has the job issue — almost five million out of work. He has the fiscal issue — a four-year Republican budget deficit of over $75 billion. He has the supermarket issue — highest prices now in 14 years. All this plus the worst United States trade deficit last year in this century.

Larry O'Brien, the old pro from the Kennedy days, keeps trying to buck up the Democrats by telling them that Nixon is vulnerable precisely on the Democratic party's strongest concerns.

Thus he notes that the Harris Poll, while giving Nixon a 24-point lead over

GEORGE McGOVERN
. . . domestic issues

McGovern, shows that 68 per cent of those polled give the president a negative rating on keeping down unemployment, 79 per cent rate him negative on keeping down prices, and 69 per cent vote against his record on taxes and spending.

Even the law-and-order issue, which helped the Republicans in the 1968 election, is not much of an issue for the president this time. For while the FBI's latest survey shows the smallest rate of increase in six years, the fact is that crime goes up — violent crime and crimes against property were all up last year, and half the serious crimes reported last year are still unsolved.

All this, plus six million more people on welfare during Nixon's first term, plus some highly suspicious Republican financial, and bugging activities, would seem to give McGovern a solid foundation for an effective campaign, but still he seems to be on the defensive most of the time.

The surprising thing about this is that the president has been able to keep the foreign policy initiative even while conducting the heaviest bombing campaign of the war, and at the same time has kept the focus on the weaknesses of McGovern's domestic proposals rather than on the factual Nixon record of the last three and a half years.

One of the paradoxes of this is that it is now the McGovern people who are complaining that the reporters are giving all the news breaks to the Republicans instead of the other way round, while Vice-President Agnew is calling for a campaign truce with his old antagonists of press and television.

Two Major Speeches

In this struggle for the attention of the voters, however, personality is also a factor, and so far McGovern has been no more successful than the president in establishing his personal popularity.

He has made only two major speeches since winning the nomination — his acceptance speech which was delivered while most of the nation was asleep, and his revised economic speech to the security analysts in New York, which was delivered at the lunch hour and not even carried on any of the commercial networks.

He has covered a lot of ground, and lately his crowds have been picking up, but unlike Kennedy, who managed to defeat Nixon by imposing his personality and his vision of the future, McGovern has still failed to come across as a decisive presidential character.

Remembered, But the Argument Goes On

That so many thousands of Frenchmen turned out on the 30th anniversary of the Dieppe raid to pay homage to the Canadians who died there is gratifying indeed. They were soldiers deserving of such a tribute.

Whether it will help to quell the controversy still swirling around that Aug. 19, 1942 raid remains, however, very much a question. In nine hours, the Canadian force of 4,963 suffered 3,367 casualties, including 907 dead and 1,946 taken prisoner.

Many versions of the attack have been written and voiced, among them that it was a pre-invasion tactical raid to determine the strength of the German forces. If that be the case, the Canadians quickly learned.

At the Dieppe remembrance ceremonies, Canadian Veterans Affairs Minister Arthur Laing said: "That it was costly in human lives, everyone from the then prime minister Churchill down to the lower echelons of command deeply regretted. But the lives that were lost on that day saved thousands of others. That, in the controversy that followed, was never challenged."

If it did, indeed, save thousands of lives later, it lends some worth to what at the time seemed like such a senseless slaughter.

It is heartening that the French, 30 years later, so fittingly remembered our fallen soldiers. For those who lived through the days of the Second World War, Dieppe was a tragedy Canadians are unlikely to forget.

Slogans

Our newly-elected government, when it takes control of the provincial business, might be wise to adopt the old original slogan of the Social Credit Party when it came into power in 1952: "Honest government keeps you informed." It had been long forgotten over the past years.

If this policy were enforced and strictly adhered to at all costs, a well informed public through all forms of the news media would have no grounds for complaints re shady deals or court actions over improper handling of public business affairs such as we have experienced a number of times during the past 20 Wonderful Years. Their public image would remain untarnished when campaigning in future elections. — George A. Mackay, 24 Wellington Ave.

From the Times of Sept. 13, 1912:

Shipping men here figure that the big white liner Empress of India, Capt. Beetham, will arrive in port from the Far East before noon tomorrow. The wireless messages received from the liner seem to indicate that she will not be in before tomorrow afternoon, but it is expected that the Royal Mail steamship will be driven a little harder, and may be here before noon in order that she may dock at Vancouver before dark. The Empress is bringing a large list of passengers, both in the saloon and steerage.

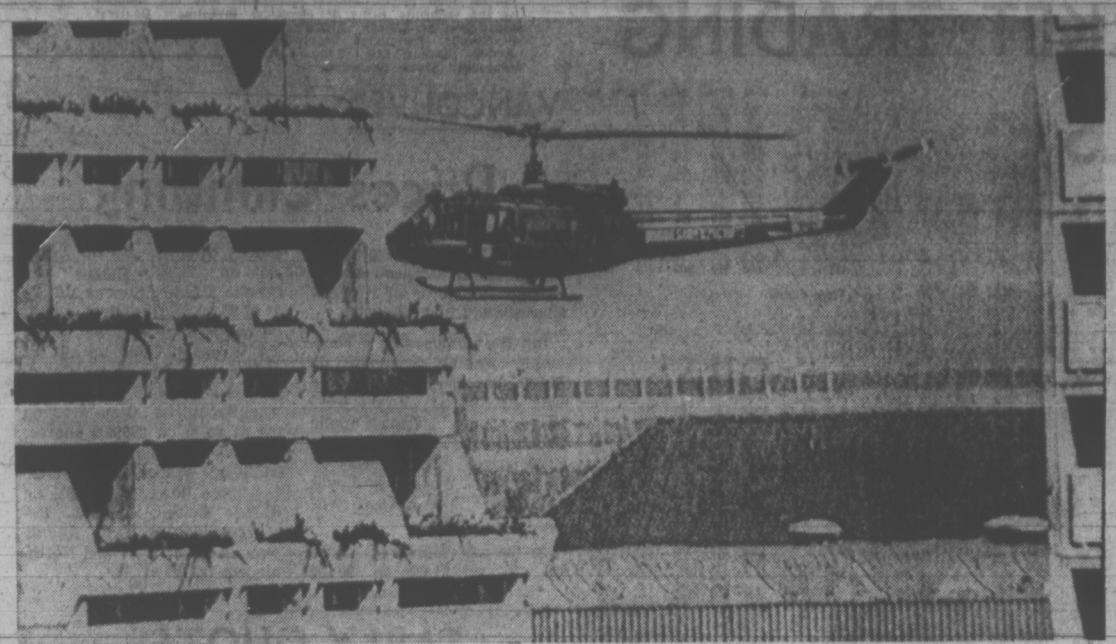
The Message Of Munich Massacre

By JAMES EAYRS



Helicopter arrives at Olympic Village to pick up guerrillas, hostages

"We try as a conscious editorial policy"—a Canadian newspaper man is testifying before the Senate committee on mass media — "to take the surprise out of living, the shock value out of things that happen." An admirable objective—and evidently more easily professed than practised. How well did our press prepare us to comprehend, let alone to understand, the outbreak of terrorism at the 1972 Olympic Games?

Yet in retrospect the scenario—all but for its tragic and needless denuncement in a kind of global Attica—seems only too easily reconstructed. The Olympics with their cast of thousands, live audience of scores of thousands, electronic audience of scores of millions, provide an incomparable setting for guerrilla theatre. The small Israeli team could not be more tempting to abductors. The month of September—two years after the bloody defeat of El Fateh by the Jordan Army in the battle of Amman —could not be more timely for some spectacular strike by Palestinian extremists.

Nor is such reconstruction a case of wisdom after the event. The West German government, foreseeing that the Israeli athletes would face special perils at Munich, offered them more than the usual security protection; that offer—for reasons the commission of inquiry ordered by Chancellor Willy Brandt will wish to enter into — was apparently declined.

That is not the only puzzling aspect to the tragedy. Much attention has been paid to the tactical miscalculation which sent five marksmen—at night, and free to fire at will—against eight terrorists on a mission impossible: the safe release of their nine Israeli hostages. But there was a strategic miscalculation, too. The West German government — again for reasons that the commission of inquiry must bring out in time — assumed that flown to some Arab state, the hostages could be given up for dead. But no precedent justified such an assumption. Arab states had released hostages before; they could be expected to release them again.

The West Germans lost sight of a simple yet crucial homily: where there's life there's hope. Their wildly reckless gamble at the Furstenfeldbruck air base saved only the Israeli government from having to make the grisly decision to sacrifice the athletes rather than set its Palestinian prisoners free.

The resulting massacre at Munich holds a special horror for Canadians, reminding us all too vividly of those terrible hours during October, 1970 when authorities in Ottawa, like those in Bonn and Tel Aviv, were compelled to calculate the trade-offs between holding to principles and sparing human lives. One veteran of that searing experience was so unnerved by it as to tell a meeting for his nomination for re-election as a federal candidate that the outbreak of terrorism at the Olympics demonstrated that the Trudeau government had been right to resort to the War Measures Act. (That is the most charitable interpretation of Mitchell Sharp's remark—as cheap and contemptible as any in Canadian electioneering.)

That a political movement is willing not only to own up to its responsibility for the tragedy but to claim credit for it is a measure of the desperate extremity to which the Palestinian resistance has been driven since its catastrophic setback in September 1970. Out of the fedayeen defeat arose the "Black September" group. The Black Septembrists are a disciplined, dedicated, tightly organized, highly trained, well financed (by loot from hijack ransoms as well as clandestine contributions originating in Arab states), underground band of terrorists.

In number they are few—no more than about 300 according to Arab informants, larger according to Israeli. They are specialists in micro-violence. Their repertoire includes all the acts of the urban guerrilla set forth in Marighella's Minimanual: sabotage, hijack, kidnap, assassination. They are ready to kill and be killed, but not (or not just) for the thrill of it. Their mission is to ensure that the cause and plight of Palestinians will not be forgotten in an uncaring world.

Their means are evil, their ends are noble. The Palestinians, through no fault of their own, are the big losers of the third quarter of the 20th century. The Jews, also through no fault of their own, were the far bigger losers of this second.

Homeless, rootless, stateless, since 1948, their predicament today is worse than it has ever been. Arab states can afford to be indifferent to their fate. Israel has acquired a vested interest in perpetuating it for, as an Israeli scholar has recently noted disapprovingly, the Arab inhabitants of the territories captured in the Six Day War have become a helot class, doing rough labor and dirty work for the conqueror.

The recent Soviet withdrawal from Egypt makes much more likely than before the peaceful co-existence of Israel and her Arab neighbours. That is good news for everyone but Palestinians for whom the status quo is totally intolerable.

Hence the attempts of Palestinian extremists to sabotage peace in the Middle East by acts of terror which to the outside world seem squalid and wanton but to the denizens of refugee camps such as El Baqaa or Zerka hold out the only hope they know—of yet another war in the Middle East of which maybe this time they could be the beneficiaries. Here, then, is the grim paradox of the Palestinian condition: as peace approaches, terror will mount.

Violence committed on the larger scale does not justify violence committed on the small. Yet it is curious how governments like our own, so quick to exhaust the vocabulary of vituperation on terrorists whose deeds result in the killing of a dozen innocents at Munich, remain silent while death and desolation are visited daily round the clock upon the people of the Indochina delta.

Still trying to think through the meaning of the Munich massacre, I chanced to come upon a document in the Pentagon Papers. It is called "Some Observations About Bombing North Vietnam," and was written on January 8, 1966, by a senior official of the Johnson Administration. Rejecting saturation bombing of heavily populated areas as unacceptable to American and world public opinion, the official turned to an alternative mode of punishment. "Destruction of locks and dams, however—if handled right—might offer promise. It should be studied. Such destruction does not kill or drown people. By shallow-flooding the rice, it leads after time to widespread starvation (more than a million) . . ." That has not only been studied, it is being done—done, despite denials by the Nixon administration, beyond a shadow of a doubt.

There is a connection, after all, between micro-violence and macro-violence, and I. F. Stone has made clear what it is. "Human society, as it grows more complex, grows more vulnerable. Hijackings, bombings, snipers, political kidnapping, fedayeen, Tupermaros and Weathermen, all reflect the power this gives a desperate few. But technology is not the essence of their power. At its inner core is a sustaining moral indignation which gives these few the strength to live and die as outlaws. They will not be stopped until this inner sense of righteousness is undermined, and this can be done only by society's willingness to take a fresh look at the morality of its own behavior . . . Men are moral beings, and to take from the terrorists their moral justification is the only way to strike at the heart of the terror spreading round the globe." If there is any meaning whatsoever in the massacre at Munich, those are the words in which it may be found.

Action at Last To Save Whales

By SCOTT McVAY

Advocates of a moratorium to stop killing whales — which was urged by the United Nations' Conference on the Environment at Stockholm — were disappointed by results of the recent International Whaling Commission meeting at London. But the moral imperative of the Stockholm decision, persistently voiced by Russell E. Train, leader of the U.S. delegation, did contribute to a number of positive actions.

Intensive efforts the previous year had already achieved regional observer plans in the North Pacific (Japan, United States and Soviet Union), North Atlantic (Canada, Iceland and Norway), and South Atlantic (Australia and South Africa). The observer agreement for the Antarctic, involving Japan, Norway and the Soviet Union, was finally signed in London. The exchange of observers is a major, far-reaching accomplishment.

There were other affirmative notes. The "blue whale unit" (one whale equalled two fin or six sei whales) was finally eliminated, and for the first time quotas were set for every major exploited species, including the minke whale.

The fin whale quota was reduced by about one-third in the North Pacific and Antarctic. (Even when a moratorium is achieved, however, the fin will need 30 to 40 years to recover to a level of "maximum productivity.")

Quotas were set for the sei whale at levels believed to be at "maximum sustainable yield" but they do not provide an adequate margin for safety if the estimates are wrong.

Quotas for male and female sperm whales were set separately, as recommended (but, unfortunately, at levels higher than would have been the case with the combined quota).

The commission asked the United States to halt, as the Norwegian commissioner put it, "the strangulation and drowning of porpoises in tuna nets" by which some 250,000 porpoises perish annually.

An Argentine resolution was approved asking the secretary-general of the United Nations to urge nations which are whaling outside the Whaling Convention to join the International Whaling Commission and abide by its rules.

The Mexican commissioner questioned the prevailing assumption that to know more about whales we must continue to kill them in vast numbers. She was appalled to learn "that to have a meaningful voice in the proceedings we have to kill what are probably the most amazing of nature's creatures, and to kill them for profit." Such an encrusted pattern of thinking contrasts sharply with President Luis Echeverria Alvarez's recent action to establish a haven for whales in the peninsula of Lower California.

A permanent secretariat of the commission will be established and its convention brought up to date. An international decade of cetacean research was declared, giving impetus to studies of the living whale.

Used whaling equipment will not be sold to non-member nations.

The moratorium idea, which has taken hold in the West in the past two years, caught the Russians by surprise. Not the Japanese. They were at Stockholm. They feel world opinion more strongly and may have to harken to it, especially when threatened by a boycott of Japanese cameras, cars and radios. Also, the Japanese people, including many gifted writers and scientists, are sick of whaling and no longer find whale meat very palatable.

The problem is profit. While only 17 per cent of the fishing effort of one Japanese company is directed at whales, more than 50 per cent of its profits are from butchered whales.

Where Was the CBC?

By VIVIEN NELLES and CHRISTOPHER ARMSTRONG
The Globe and Mail

The new Broadcasting Act requires the CBC to promote national unity. Fears that this might lead to totalitarian thought-control have proved utterly groundless. Indeed there are times when sincere interest in what is happening within Canada seems entirely lacking at the CBC.

Canadians were forcefully reminded of this last month as the CBC let an important provincial election in British Columbia slip past without providing a single minute of national coverage. Let the British Columbians tend their own affairs. Who could complain when CBC television in Toronto was treating us to Jeannette MacDonald's unforgettable performance in I Married an Angel?

And Information Radio was doing no more. During the hour immediately after the polls had closed on the west coast, CBC-AM in Toronto carried a program on black, fundamentalist Christianity. It was a good program, informative and well-produced, but it would not have suffered from being interrupted from time to time for election bulletins.

Midnight Blackout

By midnight local time the astonishing results were becoming clear. Yet the lead story on the midnight news dealt with new air charter regulations. It was followed in turn by items on the B.C. dock strike. the arrival of the Russian hockey team, a Newfoundland by-election, the Mafia moving to Winnipeg, and the banning of hexachlorophene in France.

Finally came a report from Vancouver announcing the imminent defeat of the Social Credit government (news that had been reported much earlier by several private stations in the city).

Even after midnight the CBC steadfastly continued to ignore the remarkable news coming in from the west coast. On AM radio Don Simms conducted another of his desultory conversations with people of no consequence. His guests were stunt pilots intent upon puffing the CNE airshow.

Listeners were treated to an absolutely silly discussion of the science — yes, the science — of walking on the wings of flying aircraft (promotion takes precedence over information on our Information Radio station, something that might be said about all of the new Radio One-style programs).

By this time Premier W. A. C. Bennett's defeat in B.C. had been reported and followed up by the correspondents of private stations.

Radio, so the advertisment for the CBC goes, will take you anywhere, anytime. But not to the provinces for an election. The past year has seen a number of upsets in provincial elections in which long-entrenched regimes have been ousted by lightly regarded opponents. With some modifications what we have said about the British Columbia election could be repeated for all other provincial elections.

JEANETTE

If you happen to be outside the province in which the election is taking place, the CBC fails to provide adequate coverage. Elections in Quebec, of course, are the exception. For example, viewers in British Columbia were favored with prime-time coverage of the 1970 provincial election in Quebec, but the reverse seems unthinkable.

As we will see and hear to our surfeit in the coming weeks only federal elections are important enough to warrant national attention. Surely provincial elections are every bit as important. By giving greater emphasis to provincial affairs the CBC might better promote the national unity it was established to foster.

Affluence and migration have mixed Canadians together in recent years as never before. Consequently other people than those living in a region have an interest in what goes on there. We move a great deal; there are British Columbians in every province as there are Maritimers, westerners, and central Canadians. Everyone wants to know what is going on back home and the public broadcasting system has a duty to meet that need.

Moreover, the CBC should be telling Canadians about the habits and preoccupations of those in other parts of the country, or explaining the affairs of one region to another. In practice this has usually meant telling the people in the provinces what's going on in Toronto. Volumes could be written (principally by westerners or Maritimers) about the central Canadian bias of broadcasting.

Sealed Networks

The CBC ought to be illuminating and interpreting regional particularisms to the whole country. Instead it balkanizes the country with its hermetically sealed regional networks. If, for example, the British Columbia mileu had been seriously examined over the years on the CBC, Mr. Bennett might not have appeared in the rest of Canada to be such a comic, antediluvian figure. No better occasion for this process of inter-regional interpretation presents itself than through coverage of provincial general elections.

Provincial politics are, after all, those which most intimately affect the lives of Canadians. Yet our consciousness of issues, personalities and problems at this level of government remains fragmented. The national media concentrate too exclusively upon federal issues, ignoring provincial problems such as transportation, urban affairs and social policy. Fuller coverage of provincial elections might begin to end this fragmentation.

Provincial politicians might become less the showmen they are when they arrive at federal-provincial conferences to be greeted by reporters from the CBC.

The division of jurisdiction in a federation such as ours makes it all the more necessary that infomation about parties and programs in the various provinces be shared.

Olympics 'Army'

Is it too expensive to keep all those newsmen and technicians awake in Toronto until 2 or 3 in the morning to ensure that provincial elections are covered on television? Is so, what about radio then Apparently the technology is not all that complicated or even costly by CBC standards. An intelligent reporter with a telephone can do the job quite adequately in a pinch. On the other hand, expense has hardly daunted the CBC.

After all it seems to be able to dispatch an army to the Olympics or any other international sports event. We've also been treated to special programs on the Democratic and Republican nominating conventions in the United States and the primaries leading up to them. At least we may be assured that those in command on Jarvis Street have a clear idea where our destinies are being shaped. Not for them, thank God, in Regina or Victoria.

All of this extensive reportage of foreign news is good and necessary and ought to be improved, but coverage of Canadian politics should receive equal time.

As we get set to face another season of family life with Archie Bunker and Peter Gzowski, the time has come to demand that the CBC do what the Broadcasting Act requires. The habit of ignoring important political events in Canada's regions cannot be tolerated much longer. And, if CBC president Laurent Picard is unwilling or incapable of following new directions, then we must do all we can to see that Parliament and the CRTC take steps to remedy this situation as quickly as possible.

C. Utilities

Envorinmental performance requirements are adding substantially to the cost of new electricity-producing plants says the president of Canadian Utilities Ltd.

E. W. King also told a shareholders meeting the company is represented on a committee with other power suppliers to determine the site of Alberta's next power source. Needed by 1978, it is expected to be jointly owned by Canadian Utilities' supsidiary company, Alberta Power Ltd., Calgary Power Ltd., and the city of Edmonton Power Company.

The meeting approved a bylaw splitting common shares four for one and creating an additional 10 million shares.

Provincial Bank

Provincial Bank of Canada reports profit for the nine months to July 31 of $4,066,229 or 78.2 cents a share, up from $3,194,794 and 61.4 cents in the same period last year.

Balance of revenue before appropriation for losses and provision for income taxes was $12,931,229 compared with $10,574,794 in 1971, an increase of 22.3 per cent.

Amount appropriated for losses in the nine month period was $5,110,000 and the provision for income taxes was $3,755,000.

Assets at July 31 totalled $1,610,012,446, up 29.5 per cent over the previous year.

Cygnus Share Offer Made

TORONTO (CP) — Consumers' Gas Co. offered today to purchase at $8 a share all the outstanding shares of Cygnus Corp. Ltd. of Calgary, an offer worth about $20 million if all shareholders accept.

Consumers' already holds about 65 per cent of the outstanding Cygnus shares. Cygnus has a major holding in Home Oil Co. Ltd. Through its Cygnus shares and an additional holding of Home shares, Consumers' controls Home.

The Consumers' offer is for a cash payment for the approximately 2,500,000 class A and B shares in the hands of the public. Consumers' said the funds required for the transaction have been arranged with a bank and are not related to the company's proposed bond financing.

The two classes of Cygnus shares closed Tuesday at $5.63 and $5.75 on the Toronto Stock Exchange. Trading was suspended today pending announcement of the offer.

Municipal Finance Authority Places First Overseas Loan

By AB KENT
Times Staff

The first overseas loan has been placed by B.C. Municipal Finance Authority on behalf of local and regional governments undertaking waterworks, sewer and pollution control projects.

Curtis said Tuesday 19 million deutschemarks will be borrowed from the Westdeutsche Landesbank Girozentrale in Dusseldorf, West Germany, in a deal to be closed in the German city Sept. 27.

The lotn is worth $5,867 million, the term is 20 years, the rate 6¼ per cent and the price $97 per $100 bond.

Cost to municipalites with applications pending will be 7.8 per cent including a safety margin to cover possible adverse changes in foreign exchange rates. The hedge rate will be refunded if not required.

FAVORABLE RATE

Curtis said the authority had adopted a policy of borrowing in markets where terms and conditions are most favorable. At today's rates in the Canadian money market, the loan would have cost about 8½ per cent, he said.

In addition to the German loan, an application has been made by the authority to borrow 50 million Swiss francs, equal to $13 million in Canadian funds, at a rate of 6 per cent. Inquiries have also been made in the Japanese market.

The authority's only other loan outside Canada was its first issue, placed in the New York market.

Chairman Ron Andrews said broader borrowing powers are being sought by the authority once again, following rejection by the former provincial government last spring.

New ministers of the NDP government will be approached at the earliest opportunity with the same proposal, requiring amendment of the authority's legislation.

Pending favorable consideration, the matter is tabled until the MFA annual meeting in March.

It was also decided to shelve a proposal for over-the-counter sales of bond issues because they would remain in conflict with local direct-sale issues covering projects other than those permitted the authority.

NEW REQUESTS

Total requests for borrowing approved by the authority since March 1971 come to $36.5 million, with the total issued $33.33 million, or $3.18 million outstanding.

New requests from 11 regional districts total $10.7 million, with the largest individual requirement coming from Surrey with $4 million, followed by Kamloops with $2.25 million. The Capital Regional District has applied for $1.52 million and the smallest request is from Sidney which needs $29,000.

Retail Selling Course Offered

Two three-week courses in retail selling will be offered free starting Oct. 2 by the Victoria office of Canada Manpower Centre.

Subjects include sales techniques, display, accounting, personal grooming and other sales topics.

The course is organized by the B.C. Department of Technical and Vocational Education and the instructors and classroom facilities are provided by the Downtown Victoria Association.

'Coal Losses To End'

TORONTO (CP) — The last time McIntyrt Porcupine Mines Ltd. registered a profit was in 1970, but President Robert F. Fulton hopes it won't be too long before shareholders are once again in the money.

The company's biggest problem, says Mr. Fulton, has been the sale of coal from its Smoky River division in Alberta to a group of Japanese steel mills at a fixed price.

That price now does not cover production costs because of technical and other problems.

But Mr. Fulton, recently appointed president and chief executive officer, says he expects a new agreement to be signed by the end of this year.

"Negotiations with the Japanese that began in April are scheduled to resume this month with the hope of signing a satisfactory agreement by the end of the year," he said in an inttrview.

PRICE RAISED

Although the contract price has already been raised to $18.72 a long ton from the initial $14.95 because of an increase in operating costs, the company reported a loss of $2,078,000 in the first six months of 1972. This followed a loss of $3,250,000 in 1971.

"The loss is attributable entirely to the Smoky River coal operation," explained Mr. Fulton.

"The division's profitability hinges on the outcome of our negotiations with the Japanese customers. A technical team from the Japanese steel mills is visiting Canada and plans to tour our Smoky River operation. Beyond these developments, we can't predict profit levels."

On the brighter side, the company's gold and copper operations continue to show a profit.

"Gold production for the year to date is running slightly ahead of last year's output for the same period and a further increase is planned during the remainder of the year," Mr. Fulton said.

INCREASE POSSIBLE

The company president also said that price of copper may be in for a slight increase.

McIntyre stock has reflected its problems. It traded between $190 and $139 in 1970, between $157 and $57 in 1972 and has a high-low so far this year of $88 and $45.50.

REPORT REVIVES HAT CREEK

VANCOUVER (CP) — The support given to thermal generating of electricity in the British Columbia Energy Board report has renewed interest in the Hat Creek lignite coal deposits in the B.C. interior.

The board report suggested a major thermal plant burning Hat Creek coal as an alternative to nuclear-generated power.

The coalfield, which lies under the hilly Cariboo country midway between Lillooet and Ashcroft, has an estimated 680 million tons of lignite.

B.C. Hydro owns or has reserves on the entire Hat Creek field. The field was bought by B.C. Electric in 1960 for an estimated $2 million. B.C. Hydro inherited the field when BCE was expropriated by Premier Bennett.

The field has the potential of producing the same amount of electricity as the Peace River project for about 100 years using existing technology.

Since the Hat Creek deposits were discovered in 1877 several interests have had whacks at developing the coalfield but nothing much has been accomplished.

In 1946 plans for a "[illegible]-scale development" of low-grade coal and by-product industries at Hat Creek were announced by the St. Eugene Mining Corporation.

Vancouver mining engineer and president, Rid eway F. Wilson, predicted the project would give B.C. a tremendous new industrial undertaking that would last a "century or longer."

Wilson said an initial capital outlay of $5 million would be involved in the area which would yield "not only low-grade but definitely useful coal for industrial and domestic purposes but also synthetic gasoline made from coal, and cement made from the limestone and shale, and brick and tile."

It was an ambitious project, eventually shelved. Now it may be fulfilled to meet the province's growing energy demands.

Teck Purchase Called Speculative

VANCOUVER (CP) — A lawyer suggested that Teck Corporation Ltd. purchased shares in Afton Mines Ltd. for speculative purposes and not solely as an investment.

John Bouck, acting for Canadian Exploration Ltd. of Vancouver, made this point during cross-examination of Teck executive vice-president Norman Keevil Jr. in British Columbia Supreme Court.

Vancouver-based Teck has asked the court to set aside an agreement regarding Afton's copper ore body near Kamloops. The agreement was signed by three Afton directors and stipulates that Canadian Exploration, a subsidiary of Place Development Ltd. of Vancouver, would pay for and do all the exploration work on the Afton property.

Lawyers acting for the Afton directors say Teck's main purpose in spending $16 million on the open market to gain control of Afton was so that Teck could get the development contract instead of Canadian Exploration. Teck disputes this claim.

Bouck introduced as evidence of speculation a telex message prepared by Teck's treasurer which indicated that Teck sold 9,400 Afton shares May 23.

Jack Giles, acting for Teck, objected, saying the telex message was a rough document prepared as an aid to Teck officials and that there was some question as to its accuracy.

The case continues.

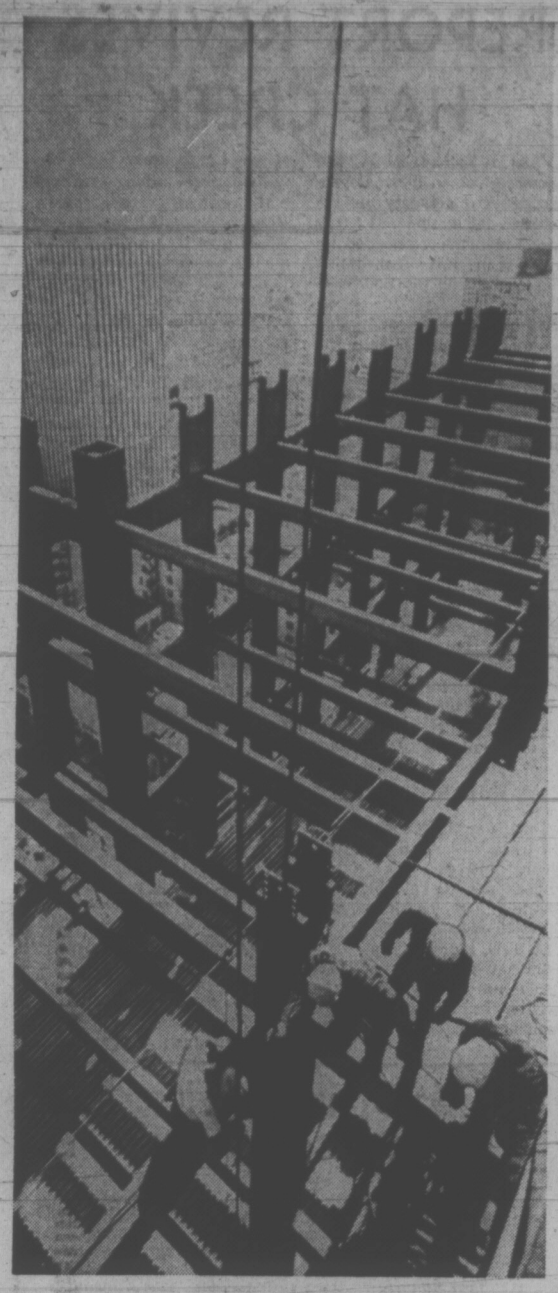
Jobless Languish in Seattle Suburbs



Another office tower rising

By ROBERT A. WRIGHT

SEATTLE (NYT) — Downtown Seattle bustles. The clamor of iron worker crews is constant as new office towers rise about the city. Department stores are full of shoppers and retail sales are up sharply. Boeing is hiring.

But out in the suburbs, in tens of thousands of homes where the American dream once was fully realized, languish the unemployed, some 12 per cent of the work force.

Welfare rolls, which include some of the formerly affluent, are bulging. The Federal Housing Administration has repossessed more than 5,000 homes with defaulted mortgages. And Neighbors in Need, a voluntary group, still collects and distributes food for 55,000 destitute families each week.

This constitutes what is now being called here the Seattle paradox, in which the phoenix is hailed but the ashes of economic rubble still smolder.

The city fathers, through the Seattle-Kings County Economic Development Council have recently tried to expose the "myths of Seattle." The mission itself is a kind of paradox: things are better than they were, things were never as bad as they were made to seem, but new industry is needed to alleviate heavy unemployment.

No one disputes the fact that the Seattle area's economic troubles were caused by the massive layoffs of the Boeing company, which in mid-1968 accounted for one in every six jobs in the area and indirectly for about two out of six.

Hit by a depressed market for its jetliners, decreasing Government business and particularly the loss of the supersonic jet transport program, Boeing slashed its payroll from 101,000 in 1968 to 37,000 at the end of last year. Seattle aerospace engineers and assemblyline workers had no place to go except the unemployment lines, and eventually welfare.

But for starters, the Economic Development Council — funded last year — with $2.65 million, mostly from local business and some from U.S. federal and local government grants — is out to dispute the one-company-town image.

Miner H. Baker, Vice President and economist for the Seattle-First National Bank, points out that general manufacturing counts for more jobs than either aerospace or forest products, the two industries most people think of in connection with the area. And last year the non-manufacturing sector accounted for 465,300 of the 656,400 non-agricultural jobs in the Seattle-Tacoma-Everett area.

"That's what people outside of Seattle don't understand," said James B. Douglas, president of the Seattle Chamber of Commerce. "Seattle is not a manufacturing city. This is a distribution centre, and a large part of our employment is in warehousing, distribution and sales."

The port of Seattle, which has boomed through the area's fat and lean years, is the council's best advertisement of that point. Foreign trade in Washington, principally through the port of Seattle, has surged from $1 billion a year in 1960 to $4 billion last year and shows signs of continuing this growth.

The reason for much of the growth has been the investment of some $80 million over the last eight years in new port facilities, particularly in containerization-handling equipment and data processing.

Still, the council is the first to concede that Seattle needs new industry if it is to solve its massive unemployment problem.

The development council, with a staff of 25 — and a board made up of the biggest local names in business, including William N. Allen, chairman of Boeing — has spent its first year largely in research and image building.

In addition to promoting the area as a great place to live, the council thinks Seattle offers industry pluses in its strategic position for Pacific trade, transportation and power.

Exit Cash Sought

JERUSALEM (Reuter) — The first cable from a Soviet Jew requesting money to pay for the new tax imposed by the Soviet authorities on emigrants with academic qualifications has been received here. The cable from Marat Katrov of Moscow to a friend, Valery Levin, who emigrated here a short while ago, said: "The price for me is fixed at 4,500 roubles (about $5,785). Please buy me out."

Refinery to Expand

SARNIA (UPI) — Sun Oil Co. Ltd. plans a $33.2 million expansion of the company's refinery, increasing capacity from 38,000 to 80,000 barrels per day.

Harry Osterander, president of Sun Oil said the company expects to begin next April, with completion expected by July 1, 1974.

He said the additional refinery capacity will mean an extra 30 to 40 jobs.

The expansion is needed, he said, to meet the "increasing demands" for gasoline and fuel oil caused by "the higher costs of importing from abroad."

No contractors had been chosen, but three were under consideration.

Co-ordinating shirts also available in our Men's Store, each $9

The low price isn't the only thing these knit suits of ours have to brag about.

Take the specially fused front, for instance. It may seem like a small detail in the tailoring, but it means the difference between a jacket that hangs smooth and crisp like these do, or one that goes limp.

Then there's the fabric: lively knits of pure polyester, or blends or polyester and wool. There's even a brand new look—a strikingly handsome "Bubble Weave."

Best of all, they look terrific . . . no matter which of the 3 styles you select. A whole caravan of checks, plains and houndstooth patterns to choose from, in Browns, Blues, Greys or Plum. What more could a guy ask for?

Substantial Growth Predicted

WINNIPEG (CP) — Ford Motor Co. of Canada Ltd. has forecast a bright economic outlook for 1973 in the country's midwestern region — Manitoba, Saskatchewan and the extreme northwestern section of Ontario.

A 1973 economic forecast prepared by the Oakville, Ont., company predicts substantial growth next year over 1972 levels in retail sales, employment, gross provincial product, incomes and capital spending in the area.

It says the Prairie economy rides "the roller coaster" of the world grain market and this year is near the top of its cycle.

The report also notes that the Canadian Wheat Board has alerted grain producers to expect a summer and fall of unprecedented grain delivery levels.

11 PER CENT HIGHER

The company's economists say capital spending is projected to increase by 11 per cent in 1973, the third highest of any region and more than double the national average.

On another subject, company president Roy F. Bennett of Oakville said an apparent government freeze on new car prices in the United States is placing the Canadian auto industry in a difficult position.

Bennett said the Canadian auto industry has been trying to narrow the gap between Canadian and cheaper U.S. prices.

European Interest 'Exciting'

By KEVIN DOYLE

LONDON (CP) — European interest in Canadian investment opportunities has entered a period of substantial expansion which shows every sign of continuing, stockbrokers and fund managers here say.

No figures are yet available to show the precise increase in fund movements to Canada but a number of brokers interviewed described it as "large enough to be excited about."

They said a fairly large inflow of European investment in Canada was likely to build up through October and November. This was almost certain to be sustained as long as the Canadian economy continued to expand and markets in Europe and Japan remained relatively slack.

Spokesmen for the Canadian investment firms of Nesbitt Thomson Co. Ltd., Greenshields Inc. and Wood-Gundy Securities Ltd. said Monday the main European interest so far is in nickel, oil and other natural resources, breweries and leading heavy industries.

A spokesman for Wood-Gundy said the current increase in interest is comparable to an upsurge in European attention to the Canadian market in the late 1950s.

"But investment now is less speculative, less dramatic and directed more to long-term growth stocks," he said.

The spokesman said most Europeans took to economic conditions in the United States as a prime indicator of the strength of the Canadian economy.

"At the moment, and likely for some time to come, the U.S. seems to be on an upswing. This makes the Canadian economy look even better because it has fewer social instabilities to contend with, he said.

A Nesbitt-Thomson official said he found some European investors upset by the recent NDP election victory in British Columbia. "They were concerned about the dangers of provincial 'takeovers of leading firms and so on but they were relatively easy to reassure."

A spokesman for Greenshields said Europeans have looked to their own markets for investment opportunities over the last couple of years as well as to that of Japan.

"But, Japan, Europe, and especially Britain, are not looking nearly as healthy now and Canada seems to be moving ahead."

The British stock market had its worst day in three months Monday as a crashing fall in share prices wiped millions of pounds from market values.

The Greesshields official said Europeans are likely to remain optimistic about Canadian investment prospects as long as a real growth rate approaching seven per cent could be maintained. Inflation was not a major problem.

Manufacturing's Seasonal Slump Hits Most Areas

By JAMES NELSON

OTTAWA (CP) — Shipments from Canadian manufacturers dropped to less than $4.1 billion in July from nearly $4.8 billion in June, a seasonal slump that affected all provinces except Newfoundland, Statistics Canada reported Tuesday.

Manufacturers' shipments usually drop sharply in July, mainly due to summer vacation closings or slow-downs, and this year's drop of 14.8 per cent compared with one of 14.7 per cent in 1971.

The statistics bureau said that at the end of July, manufacturers had a backlog of unfilled orders totalling $4.8 billion, compared with $4.7 billion at the end of June and $4.6 billion at the end of July last year.

TREND MIXED

But Statistics Canada reported also that considering the usual seasonal factors involved in new order placement and the carryover of unfilled orders at the end of the month, a mixed trend was recorded in July this year.

New orders for durable goods were down by 1.4 per cent, while orderr for non-durables were up by more than three per cent. The backlog of unfilled orders for durables was up by less than one per cent, while the backlog for non-durables was up 2.9 per cent.

The trend of new orders for durable goods and the backlog of unfilled orders for durables is important to the manufacturing industry as a whole, because durable goods usually represent longer-term work commitments. There tends to be a much faster turn-over of orders and shipments of non-durables, making that sector of the manufacturing industry more subject to shifts in employment activity.

INVENTORIES STEADY

Statistics Canada said that inventories held by manufacturers in July were little changed from June, but smaller than they were a year ago.

Inventories amounted to 1.8 times total shipments in June and July this year, compared with twice the amount of shipments in July last year. Inventories of finished products were also down.

All provinces reported lower shipments in July, compared with June, except for the relatively small fanufacturing activity in Newfoundland, which grew by two per cent.

Ontario shipments were down 19 per cent to $2.1 billion from more than $2.5 billion. Quebec shipments were down 11 per cent to $1.1 billion from $1.2 billion. British Columbia shipments were down 13 per cent to $342 million from $393 million.

Environmentalists Causing Energy Concern

DRYDEN, Ont. (CP) — Robert H. Hay of Kingston, Ont., a member of Ontario's advisory committee on energy warns that the province faces a grim energy prospect.

Sharply accelerated demand coupled with the "sudden and dramatic" concern of environmentalists is putting a squeeze on available energy resources, he told a district meeting of the Ontario Municipal Electric Association.

Ontario imports 83 per cent of its energy requirements from Western Canada and elsewhere. But even such sources are not inexhaustible.

"They're not finding more gas and oil in Alberta. The rate of discovery no longer matches the rate of increase in consumption.

"Excluding the Mackenzie delta and the Arctic island finds, Canadias gas will last us another 20 years, crude oil will last just past 1980 and only the oil sands will extend that to 1995-2000."

Mr. Hay, a past president of the OMEA, said Ontario, with hydro-electricity as its only indigenous source of energy, has managed to become the most productive sector of Canada's economy.

"But we are also the most vulnerable to the energy crisis that has hit the United States. Unless we move with wisdom as well as swiftness and boldness the blackouts, the brownouts and the shortages will be upon us too."

SEES ONE BRIGHT SPOT

He said the only bright spot on the horizon is successful exploitation of the heavy water system for nuclear power generation as reflected in the success of the Pickering station near Toronto.

The greatest increase in energy demand in Ontario has been for electricity. The province's present rate of growth for enegy as a whole is 4.6 per cent but for electricity the rate is 7.1 per cent.

However, a conflict has developed between the needs for industrial and economic growth and the energy requirements to supply them, and the ecologists' desire for a "risk-free" environment.

"To an extent not at all generally appreciated the reduction of pollution and protection of the environment will, of themselves, materially increase the demand for electricity," Mr. Hay said.

"We are ready and willing to minimize the adverse impacts involved in the generation of electrical energy. . . . However, there cannot be a risk-free environment. There never has been."

Development of nuclear power is the most promising answer to Ontario's dependency on increasingly scarce and expensive outside fuels.

But, Mr. Hay added, there will be, environmental and ecological impacts which co-operation and logic should be able to minimize.

Naden Band To Tour Pacific

An 18-musician section of the Canadian Forces Naden Band leaves Monday to join the operational support ship HMCS Provider in Hawaii.

The specially selected concert band will accompany Provider and ships of the 2nd. Canadian Destroyer Squadron on a four-month tour of the Pacific.

More than 60 official and public engagements have been planned so far, including concern tours of Australia and New Zealand.

Capt. Ben Bogisch, director of music, who conducts the show band and plays piano, expects the schedule to be even heavier when finalized.

"Enquiries are coming in all the time," he says. "It seems as if our modern style of music and entertainment has fired their interest."

Instruction For Divers

Female Cadets Choose Combat

By SUSAN MURRAY
Kitchener-Waterloo Record

CFB BORDEN, Ont. (CP) — Weighted down by a 10-pound rifle and heavy gear, Ruth Johnston moved swiftly, cautiously through the bush, watching for signs of enemy troops.

No she was not in Israel.

The female private was one of five girls making Canadian military history by being among the first female army cadets to take combat training.

They were the first female trainees from Waterloo Country to be accepted into the six-week militia training programs. Capt. Charles Hill of the London militia district said other Canadian Forces Bases have also shaken tradition by allowing girls to take combat training, but the five from Kitchener were the only ones at Borden this year.

They fired sub-machine guns, dug trenches, smeared their faces with charcoal and green paint, and lived on field rations.

"See, sardines and powdered potatoes," said Paula Koch, showing her box of packaged rations.

OPPOSED ASSIGNMENT

The girls had to argue for their chance to take part in the overnight combat and infantry training session at Borden to finish their six weeks.

They had taken the first two weeks on basic training at the Kitchener armory with the boys. Then they were assigned to clerical duties, the normal work of Canadian army women, while the boys went on to special infantry training.

The girls fought the transfer.

"It will be too boring," said Heather Martin.

"Dull, dull, dull," was Bev Stumpf's reaction.

"I hate secretarial work," Debbie McBride said.

So Capt. Hill agreed to let them go to Borden. They had already gone on two overnight bivouacs, had dug trenches, learned tactics, practised map reading and the use of radio sets. But this was their first experience with live ammunition, shooting at moving targets.

They wore regulation uniforms except for the shoes.

There were no boots small enough for them, so they wore loafers and running shoes, and as a consequence were not allowed to go on a five-mile route march. They were also exclused from firing rocket launchers because they weigh 28 pounds or more.

BETTER THAN BOYS

But the girls took tears gas training and generally acquitted themselves well enough to get praise from the instructors, from the Highland Fusiliers of Canada.

"You know, their scores are better on the average than the boys," said Sgt. Richard Goebel, reading rifle practice results.

Master Warrant Officer Vern Cain, a combat training specialist, said: "It looks as if females in the army is the up and coming thing.

"These girls seem to be a real asset to the course. They don't ask any favors and are prepared to do everything the boys do."

MWO Cain said there have been problems recruiting boys recently.

"The army may be forced to open up more occupations to women."

None of the five girls had been reserve army members, but now they all say they want to join in the fall.

Cosmic Speeds Puzzle Experts

By BILL STOCKTON
AP Science Writer

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — For most of the 20th century nothing in science has been as inviolate as the speed of light.

Albert Einstein's provocative theory that nothing, anywhere, can travel faster than 186,300 miles a second has become a cornerstone of modern physical science.

But astronomers have discovered another object far out in the universe that seems to be blowing apart at several times the speed of light — in direct conflict with the idea first advanced in 1905.

The latest finding is by a team of astronomers from the California Institute of Technology here, Cornell University and the National Radio Astronomy Observatory at Greenbank, W. Va. It brings to three the number of the objects detected since the first discovery 18 months ago.

Radio astronomers say this new finding is further evidence that the original observations weren't just quirks of nature.

But experts still are no closer to understanding what strange processes might be at work in the distant heavens.

And the discoveries have become one of the most intriguing puzzles that face the scientists who daily scan the skies with their giant dish-shaped antennaes listening to the crackling radio signals of the cosmos.

For the moment, few astronomers are ready to concede that Einstein's fundamental ideas about light, matter and energy might have a flaw.

But the possibility remains, the scientists agree, that they could be observing fundamental astronomical events that might have a profound effect on man's concept of the universe and matter.

The astronomers found a galaxy 3.5 billion trillion miles away in which two objects were expanding at two or three times the speed of light.

Prior to that discovery, two quasars had been detected in which radio signals indicated objects were expanding rapidly — in one case at 10 times the speed of light. Quasars are strange sources of light and radio noise far out in the universe whose nature also isn't understood.

POSE MODELS

All the mysterious objects were found after radio telescopes thousands of miles apare were hooked together to provide observations in much greater detail. In each case, radio signals from the objects were detected initially and then received again several months later.

When the objects' positions were calculated the second time, the startling conelusions emerged that they had to be moving apart faster than light.

Scientists can't resist trying to explain the unknown. So they've come up with three "models" of what might be happening. In one model, they envisage a string of objects embedded in a quasar or galaxy that blink their radio signals on and off in a random fashion like lights on a Christmas tree. The observations from earth just happened to catch different objects, giving the illusion of speeds faster than light.

In another model, the astronomers speculate the radio signals they're receiving first were reflected off something that itself was moving almost as fast as light. The net result is an illusion of very rapid movement.

In the cannonball model, astronomers envisage two distant objects hurled at the observer on earth and moving apart slightly as they approach. Radio waves from these objects could interfere with one another and give the illusion of velocities faster than light.

QUESTION BASICS

There is a fourth, controversial possibility. It enjoys little support because it questions a decades-old basic yardstick used to measure astronomical distances.

If this yardstick — based on the shift of light toward the red color of a distant object — is wrong, a few astronomers suggest, then the mysterious expanding objects aren't as far from earth as everyone thinks.

If that's the case, they argue, a fundamental distance used in the startling calculations is wrong and the objects aren't expanding faster than light at all.

SECOND SECTION

Target: 21% 'Green' in Saanich

By AB KENT
Times Staff

A 5,390-acre network of fields, forest, parks and institutional lands laced with lakes and waterways is visualized in a Saanich proposal for greenbelt protection.

If followed to its conclusion, the Saanich proposal would encompass about 21 per cent of the municipality's total area, with new acquisition accounting for 1,865 acres at a cost currently estimated at $6.2 million.

Mayor Hugh Curtis, who called the plan the most comprehensive document of its kind, presented it to the Social Credit government in April for consideration under terms of the $25 million Greenblet Protection Fund Act.

He deliberately kept the plan under wraps for fear of jeopardizing the municipality's chances of getting government acceptance and to prevent it from becoming a political issue in the recent election campaign.

The Bennett government accepted the plan cordially but committed no funds to land acqusition in Saanich before the Aug. 30 election which turned out Social Credit.

Curtis, in releasing the submission, said today Saanich will resubmit the proposal when it is determined who will be the responsible ministers in David Barrett's NDP cabinet.

"I would hope the quality and thought of the presentation and the soundness of the plan would combine to commend the plan to any government," Curtis said, referring to it as a "politically neutral document."

"In our view it is a true greenbelt proposal in that it relates to land not necessarily adjacent to highways," he said.

This was a reference to a narrow interpretation placed upon the Greenbelt Act by the former government, favoring "visible" greenspace bordering arterial routes.

According to the Saanich view, Greenbelt Protection Act funds "should be used to separate a rural or semi-rural area from an urban area," said Curtis.

Saanich's proposal outlines a roughly fiddle-shaped area of urban development bounded by Swan Lake, Blenkinsop Valley, Beaver-Elk Lakes and Colquitz River basin.

Narrow bands of green space connect each of the major open spaces and in turn other green areas radiate from the periphery in the form of outlying parks, waterways and recreation areas.

These are shown in the proposal as agricultural lands and forest in the west Saanich area north to Prospect Lake and the Central Saanich boundary, west to Francis Park and east to Mt. Douglas Park.

A smaller thrust of land would connect the lower Colquitz at Portage Inlet to the Marigold area south of Swan Creek junction where Saanich is engaged in land acquisition on its own for greenbelt and flood plain protection purposes.

Improved and developed waterways running through the major part of the ultimate green area would enable canoeists to travel from the north end of Elk Lake through the Colquitz system to Swan Lake and northward again into Blenkinsop Lake, which could be greatly enlarged.

Patricia Bay Highway would run almost through the exact centre of the oval, cutting the botoom of it at one of the narrowest points near Saanich municipal hall.

At the north end, or "handle" of the fiddle, the highway would be bounded on the west side by greenbelt and Beaver-Elk Lakes. The proposal makes no recommendation for lands east of the highway anywhere north of Royal Oak Burial Park.

"Only the infusion of substantial amounts of public monies to acquire full or part interest in land can fully accomplish the greenbelt protection goal," states the Saanich proposal, which was prepared by municipal planning and technical staff.

It says other North American experience shows zoning and other regulatory measures are ineffective over the longer term in protecting green space.

Flood plains, steep slopes, selected wooded areas, wetlands and prime agricultural lands need protection now to assure quality environment for living and make maximum use of resources, to provide adequate future recreation space and relieve unbroken urbanization to achieve socially desirable living space.

"Suburban Saanich is still in a position to establish a broad greenbelt capable of providing a permanent frame to the main urban area of the capital region," the proposal says.

"However, it cannot be overemphasized that the time for action is now before development pressures push raw land values beyond the realm of feasibility."

It is noted that much of the land resource is unsuitable for urban development in any case.

On its own initiative and through the Capital Regional District, Saanich since 1960 has spent just over $5 million on the purchase of land for parks, recreation and open space.

The further greenbelt acquisitions would provide a "linear open space system" for "breathing space" capable of a variety of uses compatible with the urban areas it is designed to "shape, serve and protect."

"The skeleton of the greenbelt is made up by the lakes and streams, the varied topography that nature and the passage of time have bestowed on the land," states the proposal.

Of the proposed area to be acquired, 72 per cent is suitable for farming and the plan suggests provision for leaseback of farm properties. There are also a variety of ways suggested to acquire further lands for the greenbelt, including outright sale with lifetime occupancy rights of the owner.

"Initial approaches have been made to property owners so that it does not come as a great surprise that we are interested in their land for greenbelt," Curtis said.

He pointed out the plan must remain flexible, however, and is therefore subject to revision.

Open space should include wildlife sanctuaries, the preservation of historical or archeological sites and a trail network for hikers and cyclists, the proposal states.

It is noteworthy that under the proposal the existing 783 acres of lakes in Saanich, having 11 miles of shoreline, could be expanded to double the area and nearly triple the shoreline.

The submission was not prepared in isolation, Curtis said.

"It was put together with reference to regional district staff," and it includes a recommendation that land in View Royal, Colwood and Metchosin areas be considered for acquisition, keyed to the Saanich greenbelt.

"The environment of the Saanich Peninsula is unique in Canada," the report says, concerned that it remain so and not permit Victoria to become "just one more North American city."

"If this happens the economic consequences alone would be disastrous. It is our contention that only by the protection of substantial amounts of land within a greenbelt system can this character be preserved from complete change.

"It is therefore a wise investment which in our view must be made without delay," the submission asks.

Copies of the proposal, assembled with colored photographs, maps and tables at a cost of about $1,000, will be available for purchase through Saanich planning department.

Death of a Hunter —Once Was Enough

One of the kindest and gentlest men I know phoned me Saturday, opening day of the season for antlered deer, and asked me if I'd like to go on my second hunting trip and I lied.

It wasn't the state of my health, as I said. The truth is that once was enough. Sure, I accept his word that the serious hunter is not a monster lusting for blood, that the sport calls for skill and patience and stamina. But, for me, once was enough.

I think back to that moment of decision as a tableaux in which each detail seems not merely remembered, but precisely etched on the mind. I remember stepping over a windfall swathed in moss with the texture of velvet, the color of young apples. I was breathing heavily from the climb up through the cedars. I leaned the rifle against the fallen tree with the barrel pointing straight up, hoping this was the approved way as Mac had instructed me. I took off the brand new bright red hunting cap, already stained with sweat, and put it over the muzzle of the rifle. I reached in the breast pocket of my windbreaker for the cigarettes.

At that instant the buck appeared. It stepped daintily into a clearing no more than 50 feet away, moving fastidiously through the sword fern and the waxy growth of salal. It stood there, head erect, caught in a shaft of sunlight that sliced through the cedar boughs.

I picked up the .300 Savage and put it to my shoulder, closed my left eye and looked down the open, buckhorn sights. The rifle shook slightly from nervousness, but the sights were dead on the buck's neck. ("Get 'em in the neck just in front of the shoulder," Mac had said. "That breaks their neck and they go down.") My finger tensed on the trigger. I hadn't had a rifle in my hands since my army days, but I'd no doubt that I was on the mark.

The buck turned its proud head and looked directly at me.

In the space of perhaps 10 seconds I found myself examining the morality, the ethics and the pattern of the hunt. As I say, it was my first experience at this sort of thing. Until that climactic confrontation it had been one of the most pleasant mornings I could recall.

We'd been three, going on four hours in the woods, working the gentler lower slopes of the mountain without success and Mac had been growing more irritable. "They oughtn't to be so spooky this early in the season," he grumbled. Then, when I'd lagged behind, wondering if I was ever going to get my second wind, he'd elected to go on alone.

"I'll try the upper ridge," he said. "You mosey around down here." He was trying hard not to show his regret that he'd taken along a beginner.

So he'd gone climbing up through the stand of cedar and suddenly I felt a pure sense of elation. It was my first time in the forest in years. It was like stepping back into my youth to breathe in the clean and resinous fragrance of the woods. The morning had been cold and clammy with dew. Now the climbing sun warmed the forest floor. Birds flew and talked and thrummed in the branches above.

Once I bent to a giant fungus growing low on a stump and etched my initials with a stick on the fan of its chalky face, knowing the initials would turn sepia and would be there for many years.

I'd abandoned the stealthy walk I'd affected, somewhat self-consciously, imitating Mac. I sauntered easily along an old trail, skirted a small lake thick with lily pads, and then climbed up through the heavy cedars where I'd stopped to rest.

Now the buck was gazing steadily at me, its enormous eyes calf-like yet intelligent, timid, innocently curious. I was disturbed by its smallness. Its two straight horns identified it as a spike buck ("Not much of a trophy," Mac had said, "but mighty good eating.") It seemed frail against the backdrop of the cedars.

I found myself thinking what would happen with a single squeeze of the trigger finger. The explosion of the shell. The birds rising in alarm. The bright claret on the tawny neck. The buck's coiled-spring alertness collapsed into an inert thing. The long ride away from this green and hushed clearing on the mountainside.

I lowered the rifle slowly from my shoulder, the buck lifting its head higher, its eyes widening. I clapped my hands and sang out in a loud voice, "On your way, pal."

The buck wheeled as if it had been struck and went off through the salal, graceful yet oddly comical, too, with its stiff-legged bounds and the white tail like an erratic flag.

I lit the cigarette I'd stopped for and finished it slowly, reluctant to leave. Then I stood up and picked up the rifle, noticing that the safety catch was still on, and that was the last time I ever went hunting.

Young Foes Pack Meet

Supporters of the Campbell River school board's decision to fire high school principal John Young packed a meeting of the school board Tuesday night, expressing complaints about the school and the former principal.

School board chairman Hal Newman said today more than 50 persons attended the meeting, crowding the board room and spilling out into the hallway.

He said a total of 68 letters backing the board's decision were received from the public, most from parents of children who have attended or are still attending the high school.

Newman said six letters have been received supporting Young as principal and that only one person attending the Tuesday night meeting expressed verbal support for Young.

No action was taken by the board Tuesday night but Newman said the letters and briefs from the public were received.

4-3 VOTE

As chairman of the board, he had made an announcement to the meeting of the disposition of Young's case. The meeting was opened to the public and the anti-Young presentations were heard.

The Campbell River board voted 4-3 last Thursday night to terminate Young's employment. The board had earlier suspended him for "misconduct and neglect of duty" over a memo Young had sent to the board, objecting to a list of rules the board wanted him to enforce on students at the school.

Young is expected to appeal the decision to the minister of education and will likely get a hearing from a board of reference which will be established. Appeals to the courts are possible after a decision by that body.

In a related development, two persons charged with obstruction following a demonstration in support of Young at the school last week were remanded without plea for the second time today. Mary Hay, 40, and Robert Baskin, 17, will appear in court at a later date. Baskin is also charged with causing a disturbance.

ENERGY CRISIS LECTURES

A lecture series featuring world-renowned experts on water and energy resources will be offered this fall by the University of Victoria.

The course of 12 evening lectures, starting Sept. 20, will include as speakers the university's own Dr. Derrick Sewell and Dr. Earl Cook, dean of geosciences at Texas A and M university, who is an advisor to the president of the United States on energy problems.

Sewell is an economist and geographer and one of the world's leading authorities on energy and water resource management. He is a member of the technical advisory committee for negotiations of the Columbia River Treaty and an advisor to both NATO and the UN on water and energy resources.

Information on the lecture series can be obtained from Uvic's division of continuing education.

The series will explore the critical choices which must be made within the next 10 years concerning the quantity and the method of producing, transmitting and consuming our supply of exploitable energy resources.

Smoking Dump May Shut School

Threats came at a meeting of the Sooke school board Tuesday night when parents of seven children at Millstream Elementary said they would keep their children out of school until the smoke problem from the dump is solved.

School district superindentent E. E. Hyndman said today it is up to Dr. Smillie to decide whether smoke from the dump is a health problem and that Smillie has the authority to close the school down if he feels it is necessary.

Smillie has already been at the school today and Hyndman said it is likely he will make a report to the school district shortly.

"I agree that if the smoke is a danger to the youngsters, they shouldn't be at the school," Hyndman said. "But at the same time, people shouldn't be panicking if there is no real danger."

Hyndman said he had seen no trace of smoke Tuesday afternoon at the school, but that the worst problem appears to be in the morning when low-lying cloud keeps the smoke close to the ground.

Smillie was unavailable for comment this morning.

Hospital Marks Name Change

An official ceremony will be held at Victoria General Hospital at 2:30 p.m., Sept. 26, to change the name of the building from the old St. Joseph's Hospital.

At the same time, a plaque from the medical staff of the hospital paying tribute to the Sisters of St. Ann will be unveiled. The ceremony will be at the Collinson Street entrance.

HAIRY PROBLEMS OF VOTE COUNTERS

Long-haired "hippie-type" enumerators are creating headaches to one Vancouver returning officer, but the problem is non-existent in Victoria.

Humphry Mostyn, returning officer for Vancouver Centre for the federal election Oct. 30, said today that due to a shortage of applicants in that city, he had to hire "anybody" for the job.

As a result, he said, he is receiving phone calls from people complaining about "weirdos" doing the enumeration.

"One woman shut her door in a kid's face, refusing to give him any information," he said.

Mrs. Eleanor Allan, election clerk at the Victoria returning office, said she hasn't had any complaints about the appearance of the enumerators.

"But we'd like to hear about them, because it's our aim to please the elector," she said.

Mature Students To Form Club

It may sound like a theatre restriction—but a club for mature students only is being established at the University of Victoria.

The club, for students 24 years and older, will hold its first meeting at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in room 203 of Lansdowne College.

Topics like programming, financial aid, day care centres and university affairs will be discussed. Part-time and full-time graduates and undergraduates are welcome.

Predictably enough, it will be called the Mature Students Club.

Manager to Seek Socred Nomination

A 30-year-old television electronics firm manager, Bernard Wauthy, announced today he will seek the Victoria Social Credit nomination in the Oct. 30 federal election.

Nominating meeting will be held Thursday at 8 p.m. at Quadra Elementary School, Finlayson Rd. Wauthy is the only Socred who has indicated he will seek the nomination.

He was on the board of trustees of St. Andrew's Cathedral and St. Patrick's Roman Catholic Church. He is also involved in soccer and baseball circles.

Esquimalt-Saanich Social Credit Association will hold its nominating meeting next Wednesday night, Sept. 20 at 8 p.m. in the Ingraham Hotel.

Former provincial MLA's, John Tisdalle and Herb Bruch will contest the nomination.

Caouette Here On Sept. 22

Real Caouette, leader of the national Social Credit Party will be in Victoria, Friday, Sept. 22 and will address a public meeting.

In making the announcement today, local organizers could not say where or what time Caouette would be speaking, saying final arrangements will be made later this week.

ECOLOGY SLATE?

A group of North Saanich residents who describe themselves as "conservationists" took action Tuesday to fight for seats on North Saanich council in the December municipal elections.

The meeting at Holy Trinity Church in Pat Bay was chaired by Dr. Ken Martin and attended by 30 persons including Mayor Trevor Davis and Ald. Paul Grieve.

The three council seats which will be contested this December are held by Aldermen Doug Boon, George Cumpston and George Aylard. There has been no indication yet that any of these members intend to step down.

Cumpston and Aylard both said today that it is too early to make election decisions. Boon could not be reached for comment.

Main election issue, according to those at Tuesday's meeting, is the struggle to preserve the rural character of North Saanich amid increasing pressure from developers.

Those elected to a nominating committee from which three candidates will be chosen include John Lapham, Dick Thuillier, Gill Soellner, William Kierans, Richard Kirk, Ted Planta, G. R. L. Warren, Ted Radcliff, J. V. Smith and Dr. Ken Martin.

He Interprets Mother Nature

A wildlife specialist who originated British Columbia's park naturalist programs and nature houses has been appointed to the new position of assistant director of the Provincial Museum.

York Edwards, 47, says the new position will be his first direct involvement in museum work, but he has been "on the fringes" all his life.

"When I was 12 years old the people at Royal Ontario Museum in Toronto were my heroes. They used to get sick of me coming around all the time. I've been closely interested in museums ever since."

Edwards graduated from the University of Toronto in forestry and then went on to get his MA in zoology from UBC.

He began his career as a wildlife researcher with the B.C. parks branch and in 1959 initiated the idea of nature houses in provincial parks.

"The idea," Edwards says, "was to use the interpretive approach to bring nature to people who are so often unaware of what it has to offer."

Edwards said the point of nature houses is to use displays to interest people into going out and exploring wild life for themselves.

In 1967 Edwards took his interpretive program to Ottawa, where, as a staff specialist in the Canadian Wildlife Services Branch, he began a program to establish wildlife refuges across the country.

The first centre is already in full swing at Wye Marsh, north of Toronto, where busloads of urban dwellers, especially school children, arrive daily for ecology tours and talks.

Edwards, who assumed his new position last week, says he hopes to work the "ecology story" into museum displays:

"Ecology is simply a basic part of our past . . . and the past is all we really have.

"The chief cultural claim of the B.C. coast is our Indian heritage, and we're lucky we've been able to preserve so much of the arts and culture."

Edwards said he felt the museum had the potential to be the best in Canada. Besides our great Indian heritage, he said, we have a good museum building and an excellent, enthusiastic staff.

As assistant director, Edwards said he will be delegated some of the functions assumed in the past by museum director Bristol Foster.

"I hope," he said, "that I may be co-ordinating some of the new exhibits."

Edwards is also known for his book, The Mountain Barrier, an ecological study of the B.C. interior, part of McClelland and Stewart's Natural Science of Canada illustrated series.

Tarasov Set the Stage For the Russians Rise

VANCOUVER — In retrospect, and in Montreal and Vancouver, Hockey Russia beat up Hockey Canada. Suddenly we are no longer No. 1.

And when the fickle fans booed Team Canada at the Coliseum here last Friday night, it was more out of frustration than for any other single factor.

Vancouver fans don't know any differently. They aren't used to winners. To them Team Canada fitted perfectly into the mould.

Besides, the cross-Canada series had been presented on the wide screen in living color in the preceding three games. Everyone knew just what might happen.

Canada might lose. Canada did.

By the way, since when isn't a fan allowed to express his displeasure. And Alan Eagleson's statement; "If a similar series is played in the future, and I have anything to do with it, no game will be played in Vancouver," is strictly bush. Excuse me, while I regurgitate.

Meanwhile, on the ice, Team Canada was playing with a frenzy not usually associated with National Hockey League teams, except at playoff time. The Canadian players couldn't keep up with the Russians. That's why they lost, and may lose again.

The Soviet side is superbly conditioned, or as Harry Sinden said on Friday: "Hockey begins with skating; and we didn't skate."

For the Russians, It's in the Book

Of course, Canadian hockey and Russian hockey are from two different schools.

The Russians went about it scientifically.

They studied every bit of material they could get on the game, secured filmes of top NHL stars in action, and most likely have a complete book on every NHL player.

And speaking of books, probably the best one on the subject of hockey is, you guessed it, from Russia.

Most (make that all), the Russian players have patterned their play on the teachings of Anatoli Tarasov.

For 10 years, Tarasov was the coach of the Russian national team, and the architect of their destiny. If he was summarily deposed, those things happen everywhere, not only in Russia. Still, 13 of the Russian Nationals play for Tarasov in league play with the Central Army Sports Club in Russia.

And that's what the Russians will be doing for the next few days too — taking part in their league playoffs. After that, starting Sept. 18, "we will begin training for the Canada series," said Russian coach Vsevolod Bobrov. For Ivan, there will be no let-up.

Why such a stress on conditioning?

This, too, is from the Tarasov success formula.

He said several years ago that eventually Russia would get to play NHL teams, and if there was one place the NHL might be vulnerable, it would be in the simple phase of skating.

It Begins, and Ends With Skating

It was his idea that "skate, skate, skate," was the name of the game, and then everything else would fall into line; or could be taught; or learned. But conditioning was uppermost.

Normally, a hockey player skates about four miles in a game. The Russians train so they can go for eight miles. The reasoning is simple. When the other team tires, the Russians will still be skating.

Sure, Sinden knows where his problems lie; and so do the Canadian players.

They have been trying to do better only to be frustrated at almost every turn. That's why the booing of the fans rankled.

Sinden even said: "If I had been in the stands, I might have done the same thing." He was saying it was the fans' right, although he didn't really like it.

"We have never stopped trying," he added. It wasn't an excuse. It was fact.

On the matter of team conditioning, he was firm:

"If there is one thing I've found out in this series, is that Canadians don't know what top physical shape is. The Russians have shown us what conditioning is all about."

I'll buy that, and so will Team Canada.

And now, how will Team Canada do in Russia?

"Better," said Sinden, and "better," agreed Boris Kulagin, the No. 2 Soviet coach.

"We think the Canadian team will do better with each game," Kulagin said in a parting statement. "They have many talents."

"We have to," Sinden said grimly.

And every Canadian will buy that too.

True. But the simple fact remains. Now they have to use them. Let's hope they do, and not for Eagleson's sake, either.

VANCOUVER (CP)— Both the winning and losing coaches had praise for veteran Saskatchewan quarterback Ron Lancaster following the Roughriders' 24-13 Western Football Conference victory over British Columbia Lions Tuesday night.

"The little guy is going to get you sometime during the night," said Lion coach Eagle Keys. "He just delayed it this time."

Keys, former Saskatchewan coach, was disappointed with the results, especially since B.C. played well defensively and held the Roughriders until Lancaster engineered two touchdowns late in the game.

"He picked the right play at the right time and ends up hurting us, but that's experience, I guess," said Keys.

Meanwhile, Dave Skrien, although unhappy with his offence, credited Lancaster with "seeing a lot late in the game."

CALLED AT LINE

"Ron called each of those plays at the line," said Skrien, referring to five plays in which Lancaster marched Saskatchewan 67 yards and gave the Roughriders a 17-13 lead.

"The only time we looked like playing well came when we fell behind," said Skrien. "The boys must have suddenly realized they were in for a fight and could lose."

The canny Lancaster, who was meeting with little success in trying to send speedy backs Bobby Thompson and Tom Campana outside the B.C. defence, switched his tactics in the final quarter and moved to power-runner Reed, who ran through, over and around the Lions for impressive chunks of real estate.

GOES 111 YARDS

The bulky fullback ran for 111 yards on 17 carries, scoring touchdowns from 10, three and two yards out. Jack Abendschan was good on all three converts and pumped through a field goal from the 28.

Ted Gerela kicked field goals from 17 and 26 yards and added a convert on Jim Evenson's touchdown for the Lions.

Both coaches agreed that Lancaster's change in tactics turned the game around in the fouth quarter, with the Lions leading 13-10.

Fullback George Reed, running for three touchdowns, also shared glory honors for Saskatchewan as the Riders moved into a share of second place with Winnipeg Blue Bombers.

On several occasions, the Lions looked as if they would break the game open, but inexperience and mistakes cost then dearly.

In the first quarter, quarterback Don Moorhead sent Evenson, Johnny Musso and Monroe Eley at the Roughriders and the three moved the ball for good yardage, until Musso fumbled with Ted Dushinski plucking the ball away from the rookie running back.

In the second quarter, the Lions once again came close and seemed assured of a field goal. But Saskatchewan defensive tackle Ed McQuarters blew through and blocked the attempt.

On another occasion, Moorhead threw an interception, the only one recorded by the Roughriders, to snuff out another opportunity.

EDMONTON (CP) — The ranks of injured Edmonton Eskimos swelled today with the announcement by the Western Football Conference club that middle linebacker Jerry Griffin was placed on the 30-day list. Griffin, who called defensive signals, suffered a knee injury Sunday.

By The Associated Press

One game separates four teams today as Boston Red Sox, Baltimore Orioles, New York Yankees and Detroit Tigers head for the East Division homestretch in the best race the American League has had since 1967.

The Red Sox are in front with the Yankees and Orioles one-half game behind and the Tigers one game off the pace.

Monday night New York trimmed Boston 3-2 for its fourth straight victory while Detroit edged Baltimore 3-2, ending a four-game Oriole win streak.

In the West, Oakland maintained its two-game lead over Chicago White Sox, the Athletics bounced from behind to whip Minnesota Twins 7-4 while the White Sox were blanking Kansas City Royals 6-0.

In other action, Milwaukee Brewers swept a doubleheader with Cleveland Indians, 4-3 and 4-2, and Texas Rangers blanked California Angels 3-0.

It was the clutch relief pitching by Sparky Lyle of the Yankees and Toronto's John Hiller of the Tigers that produced the key victories for New York and Detroit. Lyle worked the last three innings for Fritz Peterson, protecting a one-run lead and picking up his 33rd save of the season. Hiller pitched out of a bases-loaded, one-out jam in the ninth inning to preserve Woodie Fryman's triumph. It was his third save.

The Red Sox sent Peterson to the showers with a two-run homer by Ben Oglivie in the seventh that brought Lyle, now one save shy of the American League record for saves set by Ron Perranoski in 1970 and two away from the major league mark established by Wayne Granger the same year.

Fryman carried a 3-1 lead into the ninth inning against Baltimore but the Orioles nicked him for a run and had the bases loaded when Hiller came on. He struck out pinch hitter Boog Powell and then Paul Blair bounced into a game-ending force out.

Every team needs a bench to win a pennant. Cincinnati Reds have one with a capital "B."

Johnny Bench hit a grand slam home run and drove in five runs Tuesday night as the Reds defeated Atlanta Braves 7-5.

The catcher-outfielder now has 32 homers and 106 runs batted in and the Reds have a fat 7½-game lead in the West over Houston Astros.

Elsewhere, Montreal Expos turned back St. Louis Cardinals 7-2, Pittsburbh Pirates clouted Chicago Cubs 7-0 and rocketed to a 13-game lead in the East, San Francisco Giants defeated Los Angeles Dodgers 3-2 in 10 innings and New York Mets trimmed Philadelphia Phillies 4-3.

Coco Laboy drove in four runs with a double, homer and an infield single to pace Montreal over St. Louis and give the Expos sole possession of fourth place in the East.

Hamilton Pulls Burrards Even

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two big saves in the final seconds by veteran goalkeeper Don Hamilton helped Vancouver Burrards a 10-9 win over New Westminster Salmonbellies Tuesday night to tie the Western Lacrosse Association's best-of-seven final 2-2.

Fifth game goes tonight at New Westminster.

Vancouver trailed 8-6 after two periods Tuesday and until Hamilton saved the day it had been a scoring duel between Vancouver's Bob Salt and Greenwood.

Hull's Holding Order Extended to Sept. 30

CHICAGO (AP) — Bobby Hull, former star of Chicago Black Hawks, was barred Tuesday from joining Winnipeg Jets of the World Hockey Association until Sept. 30 in an extended temporary restraining court order.

Circuit court judge Francis T. Delaney extended an original Aug. 24 court order in behalf of the Black Hawks of the National Hockey League.

Hull had been banned from playing hockey or publicizing any team except the Black Hawks. The present order will be effective until Hull's current contract with the Hawks expires Sept. 30.

Northup Enters Hall of Fame

Jackie Northup of Victoria, one of the most prolific scorers in western lacrosse history during 16 seasons with New Westminster Adanacs and Victoria Shamrocks, will be among 10 men inducted into the Canadian Lacrosse Hall of Fame, Sept. 18 in Vancouver.

Northup, now a member of the Saanich Fire Dept., started his career with New Westminster in 1945 and moved to Victoria seven years later.

He scored 634 goals during 492 games — both totals being fourth highest in western history. His 874 points is eighth highest in the record book. He also managed to register 73 three-goal games, won the scoring championship in 1950 and most-valuable-player award the next season.

Northup played in eight Mann Cup finals and won the Mike Kelly medal in 1957 as most valuable player in the final.

He retired as a player in 1961 but remained as a referee in the Inter-City League for another six seasons.

Teddy Bradbury, an Adanac star before and after the Second World War, and Ike Hildebrand, who began his career with New Westminster in 1942 before moving to eastern Canada and joining Mimico and Peterborough, are the other western players scheduled to be enshrined.

Other 1972 inductees are Jimmy Gunn of Vancouver, who represents field lacrosse although he also achieved national recognition as a referee; Dr. T. S. Perrett of Vancouver, in the builder category; George Friend of New Westminster, in the builder category; Bill Mullis of Brampton, boxla; Neil Felker of Toronto, field; and Colin Chisholm of Cornwall and Ed Ladon of Wallaceburg, both builders.

Bradbury scored 542 points in 215 games for Adanacs and was named the most valuable player in the west during 1945.

Irish Defeat Crimson Tide

Queen's University of Belfast stemmed Victoria's Crimson Tide 35-9 before a disappointing crowd of 462 Tuesday night at Royal Athletic Park.

Superior physical conditioning, coupled with an ability to mold both forwards and backs into a cohesive unit for upfield rushes engineered the Belfast victory.

Queen's University, which leaves for home today, left behind an unbeaten streak of six matches on a tour through Alberta and B.C. — with 189 points for and only 34 against.

KEPT CLOSE

The Crimson Tide made a much better match of it than the University of Victoria Vikings did against the same club one week ago. That tussle went to the visitors, 28-0.

Tide, by contrast, was down only 9-3 at half time.

Fullback Cliff Yorath opened scoring for Victoria with a long penalty goal after only two minutes of play.

After the half, Tide seemed to wilt and let the deficit run to 29-3 during the first 25 minutes before getting second wind.

STEELE LEADS WAY

Winger Wes Thomas of Cowichan raced over for the lone Victoria try seconds from the end and Yorath kicked a mighty conversion, almost from the sideline.

Irish captain Harry Steele, a husky No. 8 forward, ripped through the Tide defence to score two trys and centre Dick Milliken scored two others.

Winger Graham Carruthers scored the other Queen's try and fullback Doug Rea provided the balance of points, kicking three penalty goals and three converts.

Victoria Sierra Branch Doing Remarkably Well

stewart lang

Like a wasp or hornet, the Victoria branch of the Western Canada chapter of the Sierra Club seems to pack a wallop far out of proporation to its size.

And, despite the fact that it is often quoted on these pages, we had to do a bit of digging to find out the origins of the parent organization in the United States and its "Canadian affiliate" here.

The Sierra Club was founded in 1892 by John Muir in the California area "to enable more people to explore, enjoy and cherish the wildlands that are their heritage."

Starting with 182 charter members, organization now encompasses 125,000 members in the United States, Canada, Samoa, the Canal Zone and Puerto Rico. It was instrumental in bringing the U.S. National Park Service and Forest Service into existence and played a leading role in establishing many of the national parks in that country.

In 1970, Ken Farquharson helped start the Sierra Club of British Columbia in Vancouver and later that year a branch was organized at the University of Victoria.

Other branches of the chapter are located in Alberta, the Northwest Territories (as far north as the Mackenzie Delta), Yukon and elsewhere in B.C. Another Canadian chapter is located in Ontario.

It was in 1971 that the UVic branch decided to expand beyond the academic walls and get the general public involved.

Things began to blossom because the younger members injected enthusiasm and action into the group as a whole — which is something that other conservation and sportsmen's groups should note.

The first project was a drive to include the Nitinat Triangle in Pacific Rim National Park.

Members went into the area to collect on-the-spot data and backed this with information gleaned from the B.C. forest service before getting petitions located in the major shopping centres around town in April, 1971. They collected 10,000 names — and made certain that every person knew just what he or she was signing.

From there the campaign snowballed. Many trips through the area were organized, vice-president John Willow made a film of the area and telecasts were made on the local cablevision station as well as western Canadian outlets of the CBC and CTV networks.

Last October the Victoria group decided to expand the scope of its activities, becoming involved in the establishment of East Sooke's regional park and supplying opposition to the sale of lands in the Gulf Islands — both by MacMillan Bloedel and Wildwood Estates.

Again appealing to the young — Sierra Club members have given talks and shown slides of the Nitinat Triangle region to most schools in the Greater Victoria area.

Their campaign to protect the Nitinat Triangle came into national focus during that meeting with Indian affairs and northern development minister Jean Chretien in March of this year when about 800 people had to be turned away because Newcombe Auditorium was packed.

"The success of the Sierra (in the Nitinat question) was due to the fact that so much factual information was brought out. We made very sure of our facts before we launched out into any public debate on any of the timber company statements."

And this careful adherence to the facts brought a bonus.

"I think that what we have achieved is a degree of credibility in our organization," added Eve.

Because the Sierra Club is activist, rather than like a lot of organizations that merely vent their spleen with infrequent letters of complaint, it suits a lot of people.

The "credibility" also opened the way to support of the organization by prominent businessmen and various people of professional stature.

An active (again that word) concern by a majority of members is what has made Sierra's accomplishments within a short two-year lifetime here so remarkable — five percent of the members aren't left with all the work.

Coast League Standing Pat

VANCOUVER — London Boxing Club of Victoria and Simon Fraser University have both lost out in bids to join the Pacific Coast Soccer League.

Both clubs submitted applications to join the league when it was announced that Vancouver Firefighters had decided to pull out of the eight-team loop for financial reasons.

However, league spokesman Dennis Lewis of Vancouver said the league will continue this winter with the seven remaining teams — Victoria Gorge Molsons, Victoria West-United, North Shore Labatts, Westminster Blues, Paul's Canadians, Inter-Italia and University of British Columbia Thunderbirds.

The PCSL executive has decided to experiment with a series of inter-locking matches with clubs in the Vancouver Inter-City League rather than add new teams.

The league, for players under 23, includes Khalsa and Vancouver Sporting Club, both from the Vancouver area, as well as SFU, Norburns and Cliff Avenue United, all of Burnaby.

Pesut Leaves Cougars; Bombers Buy Robinson

Right-winger Greg Robinson, who asked to be traded by Victoria Cougars earlier this week, has been sold by the Western Canada Major Junior Hockey League club to Flin Flon Bombers for "an undisclosed sum" of money.

Another holdover, defenceman George Pesut, walked out of training camp on Tuesday and is asking to be traded. The 19-year-old native of Saskatoon apparently indicated earlier he would prefer playing closer to home in his draft year.

The loss of Pesut, however, still leaves the Victoria club with 12 players trying for defensive slots.

Most of the younger players in camp will probably be sent to the Cougars' affiliate, Nanaimo Clippers of the B.C. Junior League.

Scrimmaging was slated to begin today and first cuts are expected to be made Thursday.

Approximately 40 players will participate in the annual intra-squad game starting at 7 p.m. Sunday where their performances will come under close scrutiny.

After the game, about half the squad will be assigned to Nanaimo, where Clippers open their camp on Sept. 18.

Kings Start Out Without Jumpers

The preliminaries are over, and now Los Angeles Kings move into the "hard-work" phase of preparing for the coming National Hockey League campaign.

Only four players are not expected to report. The four — forwards Brian Carlin and Jim Johnson and defencemen Doug Barrie and Bob Woytowich — have signed with teams in the new World Hockey Association.

The Kings' roster includes four graduates of the Western Canada Major Junior League — Don Kozak of Edmonton and Regina's Glen Toner, John Dobie and Bernie Germain.

The training-camp roster:

A QUICK TRIP TO THE STORE

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — Two convicts testified Tuesday they frequently eluded security to purchase wine at a nearby shopping centre while being held at the Collins Bay penitentiary farm annex.

Alfred W. Everall and Norman Mook said they felt the shopping trips were a rather common practice when they testified in provincial court on charges of escaping custody.

"Just the night before I got arrested I came back with a full case — that's 12 bottles of wine," said Everall. He said he had been "shopping three or four times" in a two-month period.

"I've been there three times previously," Mook said, "and I know three guys who go regularly."

Man, 18, Jailed For Robbery

An 18-year-old man was sentenced in provincial court Tuesday to a possible total of three years in prison in connection with an armed robbery at View Royal house Aug. 26.

Kenneth Samuel Conarroe, 1848 Fairburn, was sentenced to 18 months definite and 18 months indeterminate by Judge William Ostler.

Donald Ira Wickham, 22, was sentenced to four years in prison Monday in connection with the same incident. Conarroe had no previous record; Wickham had a previous conviction.

RCMP narcotics officers had the house under observation, by coincidence, when six armed men arrived wearing stockings over their heads. Three shots were fired in the house and six others were fired outside, two by police.

Conarroe's defence counsel, Lloyd McKenzie, other members of "the club" threatened physical violence if he did not participate in the robbery.

He said Conarroe was a reluctant participant and "did not know that three of the fellows were desperate for money and had no place to live."

McKenzie said Conarroe was in another room in the house when the robbery took place and was not aware of the fact a robbery occurred.

Ostler, before passing sentence, said a term of probation was not appropriate in view of the severity of the offence but said, "in my view his participation was minimal."

NDP's Lewis Off Base, Says Pollen

In attacking "corporate welfare bums," NDP federal leader David Lewis is attempting to advocate taxation as "a means of social revenge," says Mayor Peter Pollen.

Dismissing Lewis's campaign as "an ethical fraud which makes good politics but lousy sense," Pollen said Tuesday that large corporations defer their taxes for only one purpose — to reinvest the money in more productive equipment.

It was a concession commonly allowed in other countries, including "highly socialistic" countries such as Sweden, and not against the public interest because the firms had to pay the taxes eventually.

"As a guy who is quite used to knocking big corporations, I feel I should point out there's a difference between intelligent criticism of the shortcomings in our corporate structure and what can only be interpreted as irresponsible electioneering," Pollen said.

Regional Government Role Blasted

VANCOUVER (CP) — The formation of 28 regional district boards in 1967 was "a shotgun marriage," a delegate to the Union of British Columbia Municipalities conference said Tuesday.

"But that's not to say all shotgun weddings are necessarily bad," said Bill Farmer, Okanagan-Similkameen regional district chairman.

"Once the child is accepted by other members of the family, many turn out to be quite successful matches."

The 69th annual UBMC convention opened with three conference seminars on "the problems and roles of municipalities and electoral areas within the regional district."

About 750 delegates from across the province are expected to register in time for today's official opening.

Farmer said that although some members of the present generation are not prepared to accept the concept of regional district boards or regional government, the fact remains that they (the regional boards) represent "federated government" and "federated thinking."

"And we're stuck with it whether we like it or not," he said. "I suggest we all go home, make the bed and try to lie in it together."

Some delegates expressed concern that although regional districts never were conceived as "a fourth level of government" it now is being admitted that they are indeed another form of government.

CONFRONTATION

"And sooner or later we have to confront those who gave us that authority to give us an irrevocable right to govern," he added.

Other delegates said it would be preferable if regional districts had some kind of "initiating authority" as a governing body.

A delegate from Trail said regional boards were "a very unpopular fourth level of government."

"There is a complete lack of enthusiasm among municipalities because of the way delegates are appointed rather than elected," he said.

The convention's first business session gets under way today with an opening address by the UBCM president, Vancouver Alderman Ernie Broome.

Throughout the three-day conference, delegates will consider approximately 120 resolutions covering the Municipal Act, municipal financial policies, welfare, hospital and health matters, mobile homes and labor relations.

TANKER ORDERED

Canadian Pacific (Bermuda) Ltd. has placed an order for its third large tanker to be built in a Japanese shipyard.

The 251,000 (dead weight) tonnage tanker will be built at the Nippon Kokan's Tsu shipyard and is scheduled to be completed in 1974.

She will be the sister ship of the Port Hawkesbury and T. G. Shaughnessy, also built at Tsu for Canadian Pacific.

The new vessel, using a standard design developed by NKK's shipbuilding division, will have several innovations. One of them includes a tank arrangement that adopts recommendations made by the Inter-Governmental Marine Consultative Organization to prevent sea pollution.

NKK is a major buyer of Canadian coking coal, which is hauled to the west coast by Canadian Pacific Railway's 104-car unit trains.

SEMINAR OFFERED IN ADVANCED ART

Running for 10 weeks from Sept. 23, the seminars will emphasize group criticism of the participants' works, with discussion and analysis of great art of the past and present.

No painting is done at Utley's seminars, but participants are encouraged to bring their paintings for appraisal.

From Russia With Fear

By ROGER LEDDINGTON

PARIS (AP) — The Russian sat silent and grim, virtually motionless, on the plane from Moscow to Paris.

Then, Paris was below.

It was his first time outside the Soviet Union and he was frightened by the foreigners, their language and their customs agents.

The Soviet customs woman had unnerved him. She rifled through his battered suitcase tied with string. She ordered him to remove his jacket and empty his pockets.

She was young and pretty, but she was rough with him. He frequently wiped his forehead with a dirty handkerchief. He knew he hadn't done anything wrong.

He wasn't smuggling out any anti-Soviet literature.

But she didn't know that and it took her 40 minutes to find out.

The other passengers didn't look worried, but they were foreigners. He remembered how they had sailed through Soviet customs, waved past, as he hopelessly tried to repack his bursting suitcase.

They would get the same treatment in Paris and he would be suspected, questioned and searched . . . just because he was a Soviet citizen.

His name was Anatoly and he was coming to Paris to visit his sister. His wife and child were not allowed to accompany him.

The woman who gave him his exit visa didn't say why. But he knew. They were being kept as insurance. If he decided to stay in France, well . . .

The stewardess put a tray of food in front of him, but he didn't touch it. She tried once to talk with him, but gave up.

When the plane touched down, he couldn't believe how quickly the passengers filed off. At home he knew border guards carefully checked passenger lists before debarkation could begin.

Passport control . . . the French policeman had to ask him to move along twice before he realized they were finished with him.

Customs . . . and he was sweating. It was incredible. His suitcase was waiting for him when he got to the luggage area.

He saw the uniformed customs police. People were walking right past him. An agent looked at him, asked for his passport and he knew he was in for another search.

One minute later Anatoly was walking toward the sister he hadn't seen in 35 years.

He told her, "They trust me."

Stolen Art

MONTREAL (CP) — Stolen paintings worth an estimated $10,000 were recovered Tuesday in suburban Dorval after provincial police received a tip from Dorval municipal police.

Police said many of the valuable paintings were damaged.

The paintings were stolen Aug. 30 from the home of Mrs. Agnes Meldrum in Oka, Que., 20 miles west of Montreal, by three hooded, armed men.

Former Victorian Swings Sharp Hatchet as Calgary Mayor

By GERRY SUTTON

CALGARY (CP) — When Mayor Rod Sykes goes on the warpath nobody is immune from his verbal hatchet. Targets include the federal and provincial governments, the police department and the news media.

He is at his best in contentious situations and one of his favorites is taxation of the people.

"I'm not proud of being in the only province in the country without a sales tax," he said. "I think a sales tax is the fairest of all because it only taxes people with money to spend who are actually spending it.

"If it is selective you can be sure that it doesn't affect food or children's clothes or books or drugs . . . things that are necessities of life, so it can in effect, to a degree, be a luxury tax."

The tall, thin 43-year-old mayor, serving his second term, said. "Toes are made to be trod on. You can't take a strong stand without treading on toes. I've alienated people—people who thought a friend was someone who lies down, rolls over and plays dead when the going gets rough."

He said he backs the average citizen because "I have a special responsibility to the people who can't speak for themselves."

"I will fight for a square deal for a rich man if he's right, but there is no way that I have to bend over backwards to look after him or worry about his interests . . . because he's able to look after them himself."

'DIRTY BUSINESS'

Mayor Sykes, father of five children, voiced other views as fast as questions were asked.

"I don't like politics and I've never made any secret of that. I think it's a dirty business, there have to be better ways to earn a living."

Of the news media, he said: "Most of the press, the media I run into, are pretty good people . . . trying to do a tough job, it is a tough job because you're meeting deadlines . . . the average politician that I've seen lies down on his back for the press, he's just so grateful for any kind of publicity or exposure that he can get that he will do anything for them.

"My attitude is very simple. Look, you fellows can criticize me all you like but it isn't a one-way street. If I don't like what you say, right or wrong, I'm going to tell you so the way I always have—to anybody, to your face.

"I think the news media have quite a bit of house cleaning to do in their own backyard and so I'm trying to remind them of that. And their attitude is that politicians aren't supposed to answer back. . . ."

USES POLICE CAR

That's Mayor Sykes, a mild-looking man behind horn-rimmed glasses, the man who in 1969 auctioned off the mayor's traditional limousine supplied by the city. He now rides in a police car with a police chauffeur.

"I don't like the old Cadillac, white glove image, the limousine bit. In effect, I'm riding on other people's backs. However, I've been embarrassed a few times when I've had to pick up visitors at the airport because the police often send me dirty cars."

At first he only wanted to run as an alderman in 1969 to shake up the city administration he had often criticized.

"I'd been pretty critical of governments, particularly local, as being complacent, lacking leadership. I was also doing a lot of public speaking and encouraging businessmen to quit bitching and do something. Finally, I felt I'd better shut up or do something myself."

In 1969, his main priorities were public housing and an open administration. Both promises have been kept but Mayor Sykes said he wants more improvement along those lines.

He defeated Mayor Jack Leslie, seeking his third straight term, during his first campaign. Mayor Sykes received 56,342 votes or 60 per cent of 94,046 votes cast in 1969 compared with Mayor Leslie's second-place total of 32,034.

Last year, Mayor Sykes defeated four others easily with 65,879 votes or 57.9 per cent of votes cast.

SAME OBJECTIVE

After his second victory, he said his objectives remained the same as he pushed ahead with his programs for open government, housing and employment.

"That's what the people have voted for, isn't it?"

Mayor Sykes, who married his French-Canadian wife, Gisele, 16 years ago, was born in Montreal but raised in Victoria. He was an accountant with a national firm in Victoria, Vancouver and then Montreal.

In 1961, he joined Canadian Pacific and took charge of economic and financial studies in the company's research department. The following year he moved to Calgary where he helped organize Canadian Pacific's real estate subsidiary, Marathon Realty.

On his position as mayor, he says:

"I can't afford what I'm doing. I'm earning less money then I ever did in recent years here and I have far, far less security and a far less pleasant life. You've got to be crazy to be here."

He earns about $27,000 annually, counting expenses, and has resisted any revision of salaries for council and himself since he's been in office.

"There's a hell of a cleanup to do in city hall, we've got to make this a more effective administration. When we have done our job, than we can look at ourselves and say: 'Do we or don't we deserve an increase in salary?'

"We do have a problem that bothers me greatly. It's a simple fact that Western Canada and Alberta in particular have no strong federal voice. Nobody who stands up on his hind legs and calls the shots the way they really are in Ottawa."

Mayor Sykes, who works 12 to 15 hours a day, said government is interfering in areas "that don't belong to government."

"Government is interfering in family life, education to an excessive degree and in business to an excessive degree. And the consequence is that the range of conflicts between the citizen and government is growing enormously."

He said there has to be a future for local government because "the best government is one that is closest to people and the one they relate to."

"I can see all kinds of government being eliminated but I can't see local government being eliminated . . . . but I think you could eliminate provincial government with probably very few people going to the funeral."

Nixon's 'Bloodbath' Claim Discredited

WASHINGTON (WP) — The charge by President Nixon and others that the North Vietnamese murdered up to 500,000 of their own people when they took over the country in the 1950s is a "myth," according to a study circulated this week by Cornell University.

The charges are dissected in a 59-page essay by D. Gareth Porter, a 30-year-old research associate at Cornell's International Relations of East Asia project. Cornell's project office, in sending out the report, said it deserves "immediate, widespread public attention" because of Mr. Nixon's frequent references to the alleged bloodbath in North Vietnam.

"This bloodbath myth is the result of a deliberate propaganda campaign by the South Vietnamese and U.S. governments to discredit" North Vietnam, Porter charges in summarizing the paper he researched in South Vietnam and at Cornell. Porter has been a critic of the Vietnam War.

The prime source for President Nixon, author Bernard Fall, and others in describing the alleged massacre during the North Vietnamese land reform from 1953 to 1956 is a book guilty of "gross misquotation" and "fraudulent documentation," Porter alleges.

The book Porter cited is entitled, From Colonialism to Communism, by Hoang Van Chi. Chi's book — published in 1964 — was financed and promoted by such U.S. agencies as the Central Intelligence Agency, according to Porter.

Chi himself, now a course chairman in Southeast Asia orientation at the State Department's Washington training centre, was at Fort Bragg, N.C., lecturing, and could not be reached for comment.

The National Security Council cited Chi's book as one of President Nixon's sources for declaring on April 16, 1971 that "I think of half a million, by conservative estimates, in North Vietnam who were murdered or otherwise exterminated by the North Vietnamese after they took over from the South . . ."

The President added at that same news conference that "if the United States were to fail in Vietnam, if the Communists were to take over, the bloodbath that would follow would be a blot on this nation's history from which we would find it very difficult to return . . ."

Asked by Porter to document the President's "half a million" figure, the National Security Council quoted Chi as writing the following: "The guilt complex which haunted the peasants' minds after the massacre of about five percent of the total population . . ." The National Security Council added on its own that "five per cent of the total population of North Vietnam at that time would be about 700,000."

"Mr. Chi offers no ujstification for this allegation" that five per cent of the North Vietnamese population were murdered, asserts Porter, "but he suggests at one point that most of the deaths were those of children who starved 'owing to the isolation policy.' ".

Charges Porter: "This is yet another of the many wholly unsubstantiated charges put forth by Mr. Chi, for there was no such policy of isolating families, even of those landlords sentenced for serious crimes during the land reform . . .

"Yet it is mainly on the basis of Mr. Chi's totally unreliable account, the intention of which was plainly not historical accuracy but propaganda against" North Vietnam, charges Porter, "that the President of the United States himself has told the American people that 'a half a million' " people were exterminated.

In contrast to the CIA's description of Chi as a "former Vietminh cadre" who could thus be expected to have first-hand knowledge of the land reform program, Porter asserts Chi never was a party member at any time before leaving the North for South Vietnam in 1955.

"Mr. Chi was himself a relatively wealthy landowner," Porter claims on the basis of an interview with Chi. Thus, he argues, Chi could not be expected to give an unbiased account of the land reform program.

ART EXPERTS READY TO PATCH MADONNA

VATICAN CITY (AP)—Vatican art experts are about to begin the delicate task of gluing and shaping the battered pieces of Michelangelo's Pieta statue.

"Only an expert, upon close examination, would be able to tell there had been any work done," said Deoclecio Redig de Campos, director of the Vatican Museum.

A 34-year-old geologist named Laszlo Toth walked into St. Peter's Basilica May 21 and battered the masterpiece depicting the Madonna holding the dead Jesus in her arms.

Preliminary work toward restoring the six-foot-seven statue began almost immediately.

Within hours, workmen had collected the fragments, about 50 in all.

Computer on Beat Helps Halt Crime

LOWELL, Mass. (AP)—Robbers in this northern Massachusetts city have to keep a wary eye out for computers as well as police.

Lowell is one of a number of cities where police departments are using electronic data-processing equipment to set up computer "dragnets" to help stop thefts.

Information such as where crimes happen in a community, the time of day and when during the year they occur are stored in a computer which then determines crime patterns, allowing better deployment of policemen.

The program in this city of about 100,000 is directed by AVCO Systems and financed by a $96,000 federal grant prepared by Lowell Model Cities on behalf of the police department. The 18-month project, scheduled to end this October, is called BEAT—Breaking and Entering and Auto Theft.

"The heart of our work is the collection of data," said Martin Orr, a 42-year-old senior research analyst.

From the information gathered—involving past and present crime—the AVCO team determined what areas were most likely to be hit. The team then suggested more efficient ways to use the 170-man police force.

Capt. Richard A. Cullen, 57, a policeman in Lowell for 32 years and now chief of detectives, thinks the project "has a great deal of merit."

Cullen was particularly impressed with an experiment in which the computer suggested where and when to place some electronic surveillance equipment in stores. He said three breaks within six weeks were stopped, resulting in convictions of eight persons.

AL BAILEY SAYS:
It is Better NOT to Freeze Smoked or Cooked Hams that have been cut. Why?
• Because—Processed hams contain much moisture, natural juices, as well as the pickling brine which is pumped into them during the curing process.
• When frozen, this moisture expands in small droplets throughout the meat. Then, when thawed, these droplets melt and drain away, leaving small holes and an undesirable dry and sponge-like texture.

Educational Structure Modification His Objective

MONTREAL (CP) — Eigel Pedersen, McGill University's new academic vice-principal, says his main interest has always been focused on one goal — to modify the structures under which people learn.

And the appointment to the top-ranking McGill administrative post places him in a position where he can do something to achieve his goal.

It's not a position one would expect a former high school dropout to find himself in, but Prof. Pedersen is not the average high school dropout.

The 42-year-old professor of eduucation delivered newspapers and served as a silversmith apprentice to put himself through night school at Sir George Williams University in Montreal.

Years later, determined to help the children from one of Montreal's poorest areas where he himself dropped out of school, Prof. Pedersen returned as an elementary school teacher to what is known as Little Burgundy.

But teaching turned out to be far more frustrating than he had expected.

PLAYS KEY ROLE

Prof. Pedersen's concern for the educational difficulties in Little Burgundy prompted him to obtain a master of arts degree in education at McGill and later a doctorate at Harvard University.

Prior to his new appointment, he served as professor of education and dean of students at McGill.

In a Little Burgundy research project he's involved with now, Prof. Pedersen is attempting to trace the influence of the Grade 1 teacher on students after they reach adulthood.

A study of 60 people was aimed at discovering what they are doing 30 years later.

The study showed that the present achievement of the subjects is directly correlated with their success rate in Grade 1.

"The attitude of the Grade 1 student has a phenomenal impact on the learning process," he said. "The image which the teacher instills in the child is a great detriment of his future success."

The professor believes that most attempts to revamp the educational system have been one-sided.

"You can't change the system to fit the kids, nor can you change the kids to fit the system at the same time and hope the two will mesh."

Prof. Pedersen, bearded and youthful-looking, is the first McGill administrator to have a systematic training in the field of education.

His task is to keep an eye on all the faculties and assist deans in maintaining smooth-running operations.

He plans to support and promote actively the centre for learning and development at McGill. The centre is experimenting with learning methods which break down the courses into specific goals and provide easier access to professors.

Prof. Pedersen hopes to continue the work of his predecessor, Prof. Michael Oliver, who proposed providing fellowships to the centre for learning and development.

Prof. Pedersen's prime consideration is to make it possible for students to learn in the most efficient way and to help achieve what they want out of university.

McGill is coming to the stage where students will have a role in determining all policies, he said. At present, the only committees from which students are excluded are those which determine the tenure and promotion of professors.

Government-Run Research Needed in Biology: Report

OTTAWA (CP) — More government direction in overall planning of biology research and a switch to more applied research from basic biology were two main topics in a report by the Science Council of Canada Tuesday.

"The National Research Council, with the aid of its advisory committee on biology, should determine the areas of biological research that deserve its special attention because of their relevance to Canadian needs and, when necessary, encourage the growth of research in these fields through preferential granting and training policies," the council report recommended.

In a report called Lifelines, Some Policits for Basic Biology in Canada, the council said the "brief but exciting period" when basic research and training had received the greatest emphasis now is over.

"From the same quarters where, a decade ago, the call was for more science, and the more basic the better, there now comes the cry for more relevance in science."

Although the council said it recognized that the boundaries between basic and applied biology are neither clear nor well-defined, its 22 recommendations reflect a series of steps toward more applied work.

NRC should be the major federal source of support for university rtsearch and research training, the report recommended. And the NRC should have a much more active role in determining how the funds are used.

The NRC advisory committee on biology should not only take a more active role in direction and management of NRC biological research, but it also should do a review every five years of all federal activities in the life sciences, the report recommended.

As well, NRC should direct its granting program in such a way that it can determine relevant research needs and finance those programs that meet the needs.

The 73-page report deals with the direction, management, scale, manpower and funding of basic biology in the future and discusses the roles of federal agencies, universities, industries and scientific societies.

On the subject of manpower, the council said that, despite a current over-supply of biology doctoral candidates, a need for more biologists exists.

"The demand for more does not yet exist; the current supply of graduates is numerically more than adequate to fill the vacant jobs.

"It seems likely, however, that demand will soon rise, and that most of the demand will be for applied biologists, especially in the environmental fields."

SEWAGE-FED OYSTERS STUDIED

WOODS HOLE, Mass. (AP) — Researchers at the Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution are studying ways to turn sewage into oyster meat.

The idea is to feed the sewage to algae and the algae to oysters and other shellfish such as scallops, clams and quahogs.

Nothing is proven yet, and the researchers concede many problems remain unsolved, including cost.

Dr. John Ryther of the oceanographic institution, head of the project, said if the study works out the aquaculture-sewage treatment system he is devising could take sewage from a town with a population of 50,000 persons and produce more than 900 tons of oyster meat a year, worth about $5 million.

The study, which has been going on for two years in large fish tanks at the institution, soon will move to a $575,000 laboratory about two miles away.

This plant, large enough to handle sewage from 75 persons, will test Ryther's theories.

PUMPS FILTER

The plant will have six algae ponds with a surface area of 2,000 square feet, a thousand gallons-a-minute pumping rig and places for animal cultures.

The system takes algae grown in sewage diluted to about 10 per cent concentration in sea water, pumps it into a food reservoir, then with filtered sea water, into the animal tanks.

In a recent issue of Bio-Science, Ryther said there are "many hurdles to cross before this utopian solution can be realized."

One, he said, is the "unfortunate fact" that oysters and similar shellfish concentrate in their meat bacteria, viruses, metal "and a host of potentially dangerous or unpalatable organic compounds."

He said cost was a problem, too, but he gave no figures. He said he believed the advantage of "producing a by-product that is potentially valuable, both economically and nutritionally" could help offset the cost problem.

School Enrolment Drop Increases

VANCOUVER (CP) — Vancouver school board is expecting a decline in student enrolment of almost 4 per cent this year, once final figures are available.

There was a 2 per cent drop last year and this year's expected decline had been forecast at 3 per cent.

The head of the school board's planning and evaluation committee, Don Orit-chard, told the board Monday the reason for the drop in student enrolment is the declining birth rate, declining immigration and the flight of families to the suburbs.

It has been estimated there will be about 20 too many teachers in Vancouver by the end of September, despite an earlier decision not to fill teaching positions left vacant from last year.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

Michael James O'Sullivan, 19, of no fixed address, pleaded guilty to a total of 22 charges before Judge William Ostler in provincial court Sept. 7. He pleaded guilty to 17 more in the same court Tuesday.

All 39 counts involve charges of breaking and entering with intent to steal, uttering, false pretences under $200, breaking and entering and theft, attempted uttering and attempted false preences under $200.

Victoria and Saanich police detectives testified that as a result of O'Sullivan's crimes, many homes in Victoria, Saanich and Oak Bay had been ransacked between June 25 and Sept. 6.

The total alount acquired in cash and merchandise was $2,227.06.

Saanich police testified that O'Sullivan had said during an interview that he needed the money to support a heroin habit. O'Sullivan said Sept. 7 that his addiction required one and a half capsules a day.

Ostler ordered O'Sullivan to pay restitution totalling $271.66 to five stores in Victoria and Saanich.

At the Sept. 7 trial prosecutor John MacIntyre said O'Sullivan's previous record included 30 days for possession of stolen property and four months definite and four months indeterminate for breaking and entering and theft.

Ostler remanded O'Sullivan to 2:15 p.m. today for sentence after MacIntyre said, "some 17 counts outstanding are coming from the Colwood area."

A 37-year-old man, who "turned himself in" was sentenced to five months for a total of 20 counts of uttering and false pretences under $200.

David Donald Garland, of no fixed address, said he turned himself in because he wanted to free himself of a heroin addiction.

Garland pleaded guilty to uttering two cheques in the amount of $253.74 each, and 18 counts of false pretences under $200 involving cash and merchandise worth a total of $532.72.

Judith Ann Johnstone, 19, of 2122 Cook, was sentenced to two months imprisonment for three counts of obtaining food by fraud, two counts of obtaining lodgings by fraud and breach of probation.

She was placed on probation Sept. 24, 1971 for uttering and the breach of probation charge arose when she pleaded guilty Aug. 25 to the charges of obtaining food by fraud and obtaining lodgings by fraud.

Before Ostler passed sentence, prosecutor John MacIntyr said, "this is an irresponsible, untruthful woman" and "the presentence report is one of the most negative I've ever read."

"I'm very glad to hear that you don't like Wilkinson Road (prison) because that's just where you're going to be for the next 21 days," said Judge F. S. Green to a 17-year-old man who was convicted of attempted theft under $50 Sept. 8.

Gerald Patrick Swain, when asked if he had anything he wished to say before sentencing, told the judge he didn't like "Wilkinson Road."

During the Sept. 8 trial a witness said he found Swain allegedly attempting to steal a reverberator valued at $29 from his (the witness) car while it was parked at a downtown hotel.

Swain said he "was looking for a place to sleep."

"Your report is not good," said Green, "the report indicates to me that you need a good sharp jolt."

Sharon Ann Materi, of no fixed address, was given a suspended sentence and placed on one year's probation for theft over $200.

Materil rented a car from a local car rental agency, left a deposit and failed to return on the specified date. The car was later found in Regina, Saskatchewan.

Frederick Thomas Croy, 23, of no fixed address, was given a suspended sentence and placed on eight months' probation for theft under $200 and possession of a narcotic.

Croy was apprehended by Victoria police Sept. 11 after a Pandora Street grocery store proprietor reported a man had stolen a grapefruit worth 20 cents.

At the time of the apprehension he was found to be in possession of a hashpipe containing cannabis resin.

"I use it occasionally. I like it," said Croy.

"How can you afford it if you can't afford food?" asked Ostler.

Croy replied, "People give it to me free. I don't buy it."

He said he stole the grapefruit because he was hungry and hadn's eaten for two days.

A 24-year-old woman was given a suspended sentence and placed on six months' probation for theft under $200.

Louise Antionette Fridleifson, of 1820 Adanac, was apprehended Sept. 9 by a Saanich store security officer after she walked out of the store wearing a leather suede jacket, valued at $55 that she had not paid for at the check-out counter. She was later arrested by Saanich police.

Topless, Bottomless Shows Will Resume

VANCOUVER (CP) — Provincial Court Judge David Moffett dismissed charges of obscenity and public nudity against dancers and staff of a Vancouver nightclub Tuesday and operators of other clubs immediately announced plans to go back to all-nude shows.

In dismissing the charges, Judge Moffett said: "I'm satisfied the performance which has been described to me is not obscene in the light of the modern day approach of society, in a closed club type of atmosphere, in this case."

Charges were laid after three police visits to the club early this year. Other clubs in the city went to topless from all-nude pending the outcome.

Al Laforge, manager of four clubs in the Vancouver area, said his clubs would be going back to nude dancing on Friday. Others also said they planned topless-bottomless shows again.

Judge Moffett said he took into account evidence that there were two signs outside the club, one depicting the black panther symbol of restricted movies and the other warning people that if they were offended by nude dancing they should not enter.

100 Mourn Charlie

NORTH VANCOUVER (CP) — More than 100 mourners attended a seven-hour funeral ceremony for Dominic Charlie, well known in British Columbia for his weather forecasts and his penchant for telling Indian legends.

The services were divided between the North Vancouver Indian Reserve and the Squamish Reserve.

He died last week.

His wife, Josephine Charlie, said Dominic Charlie liked his house so filled with neighborhood children that it often looked like a bus station.

Products 'Hot'

VANCOUVER (CP) — The B.C. Federation of Labor has declared all products of Ocean Foundries Ltd. in suburban Delta "hot" because of a labor dispute dating back to the spring.

About 46 members of the Moulders and Allied Workers Union employed by the subsidiary of Noranda Mines went on strike April 25 after contract negotiations broke down over wage issues.

The company advertised for strikebreakers to replace striking employees.

Yoga Banned

VANCOUVE R(CP) — City solicitor E. N. Elliott said Tuesday he will recommend against the teaching of yoga exercises in public schools on the grounds that they contravene a section of the Public School Act "because of their religious conotations."

Curb Erosion

VANCOUVER (CP) — The park board will ask the British Columbia government for an estimated $250,000 to help curb cliff erosion along Point Grey beaches, board chairman George Puil said Tuesday.

Rape Charged

MATSQUI (CP) — A 25-year-old inmate of the Matsqui Institution, serving four years for rape, has been charged with raping a 38-year-old woman while out of the federal prison on a pass. Police said the man had been allowed out to play for a softball team when the alleged offence occurred Sept. 3. The man, whose name has been withheld, will appear in provincial court next week.

Youth Drunk

NORTH VANCOUVER (CP) — A coroner's jury ruled that a 13-year-old boy killed Aug. 24 in a 200 foot fall from a Lynn Canyon bridge died "while his balance was affected and the balance of his mind disturbed by alcohol." The jury heard testimony that Evan Drew Commodore died after drinking 17 ounces of so-called "jungle juice" — a mixture of wine, rum, gin and vodka. A pathologist said the dead boy had a blood alcohol reading of .12 per cent.

Edmonton Probes Jasper Ave. After Dark

EDMONTON (CP) — The city will conduct an investigation into complaints that a block of Jasper Ave., Edmonton's main street, is a haven for drunks, prostitutes, drug addicts and perverts.

A group of 11 merchants located along the 105th St. block of the avenue Tuesday petitioned city hall to stamp out the night activities of about 150 to 200 young people and an assortment of criminals.

"Doorways are urinated upon, display windows vomited upon and business affected by a crowd of toughs," the merchants told Mayor Ivor Dent.

The board of commissioners will examine the situation, said Mayor Dent.

However, the mayor said that beyond starting an examination of the area's social problems, "there's very little to say."

"The fact is that these people are not breaking the law. They may be creating a disturbance, but they're not caught breaking any laws. Congregation in itself is not an offence."

If the Shoe Fits . . .

BISMARK, N.D. (AP) — A local shoe store owner is wrapped up in a bit of sole searching.

The owner says a woman has complained this week about a pair of shoes she purchased in May and has worn several times.

It was discovered one shoe was size 11-B, the other 10-B. And both were for the left foot.

Store records shows a pair of 11-Bs in the same brand and style were sold on the date. But records also indicate that in March a pair of identical 10-Bs — both apparently for the right foot — were sold to a woman who to date has voiced no complaint.

Renewal Plan Backed

Winnipeg (CP) — Winnipeg school division has approved in principle a $1,140,000 urban-renewal program in which unemployed youths would remodel 42 older homes in the inner-city area.

Approval for the program, which would involve 100 Indian and Metis youths as well as immigrants and students from the division's youth re-entry program, depends on whether the federal and provincial governments will finance it.

Frost Damage

WINNIPEG (CP) — Heavy frosts in the Swan River district have caused damage to both swathed and unswathed crops, the Manitoba Pool Elevators reported Tuesday.

In its final weekly crop report of the year, the pool said other areas also suffered varying degrees of frost damage. Swan River was the hardest hit and rains have also held up harvesting during the past week.

Skier Jailed

CALGARY (CP) — Robert Nelson Sawyer, a former member of Canada's junior ski team, was sentenced to 3½ years after pleading guilty to possession of hashish for the purpose of trafficking.

Crown Prosecutor A. G. Park asked for a sentence above normal, due not only to the size of the haul — a 4½-pound package of hashish was seized from Sawyer — but to the fact this was not the former Trail, B.C., youth's first narcotics offence.

Market Study Urged

ALTONA, Man. (CP) — Co-Op Vegetable Oils Ltd. suggested Tuesday an immediate study be started of domestic and foreign edible oilseed markets in the next few years, related to expected levels of crop production and present crushing capacity in Canada.

The study, which the co-op said would take a minimum of three months to complete, would attempt to determine whether the market warrants increased crushing capacity at this time. The suggestion was among proposals submitted to the provincial government as the producer-owned crushing firm outlined conditions under which it might participate in joint development of a new vegetable oils plant.

Powdered Skim Milk Is A Real Money Saver

With the increasing price of milk, more and more homemakers are turning to powdered milk as an economical measure. These women have found that powdered milk can be as versatile as fresh milk. Although nothing beats the flavour of fresh dairy milk, powdered skim milk can be prepared to taste palatable. Mix with one-third homogenized milk, refrigerate overnight and serve ice cold. Powdered milk can be kept up to six month sin an airtight container and from three to four days when reliqufied. In dry form it lends itself readily to soups, casseroles, sauces, gravies, bread, and biscuit dough, as well as in many desserts. As for cost, powdered milk is less than half the price of dairy milk. A 5-pound bag of Woodward's Skim Milk Powder, which makes 20 quarts, costs 2.49 (or 12.5c a quart).

Volunteers Face Membership Crisis

—Irving Strickland and Bill Halkett photos

Solarium Patient Lorne Gets Welcome Visit from Dorothy Clarke

By SUSAN RUTTAN
Times Staff

How do you recruit young members?

That's a question many Victoria women's volunteer groups are asking themselves these days.

They are finding it increasingly difficult to attract young women into their fold. So they continue to rely on faithful members of many years standing, many of whom cannot work as hard as they once did.

"The old faithfuls are dying off and it's very difficult to get younger women out," said Mrs. H. E. Hubbard, of Anglican Church Women. Declining membership in many of the city's 69 ACW groups is the result.

Afternoon Meet

The Veterans' Hospital Women's Auxiliary, which started about 1946, still relies on wives and widows of World War I veterans for most of its 45 active members.

"It's so hard to get women out whose husbands are World War II veterans," said auxiliary president Mrs. S. C. Randall. "A lot of them are working, and we meet in the afternoon."

"The whole concept of living has changed . . ." said Mrs. V. H. V. Shepperd, of Imperial Order of the Daughters of the Empire. "The rising number of working women is one reason group memberships are down," she said.

In the past, women of the 20s and 30s age bracket were the main recuits of women's volunteer groups, said Mrs. Shepperd. Today, most of the IODE's members—350 in eight local chapters—are over 35, she said.

"I think we're all in the same boat," Mrs. Shepperd said. All women's volunteer groups are faced with the fact that more young women are working, and more are devoting their leisure time to their family, not to community work, she said.

Also, membership in older volunteer groups has suffered from the springing up of new volunteer groups in the last few years, such as the Multiple Sclerosis Society and the Auxiliary for the Retarded, Mrs. Shepperd said.

The Auxiliary for the Retarded is a good example of a new volunteer group. Just two years old, it has 85 members, 60 of them active volunteers.

The auxiliary was originally called the Ladies' Auxiliary to the Greater Victoria Association for the Retarded. The name was changed this year.

"One, it was too long a name, and second, we wanted to get some men into it," said auxiliary member Mrs. Rita Stringer. The auxiliary now has two men who help out in the group's thrift shop at 1301 Gladstone Ave.

Money raising is the traditional occupation of women's auxiliaries, and the Auxiliary for the Retarded is no exception. The thrift shop (open four days a week), a Christmas fair, and a spring fashion show are the group's money-raising events.

But members also work directly with the retarded — in Glendale Lodge Hospital for the retarded, in the Winnifred M. Clark Centre for retarded adults, with children in G. R. Pearkes Clinic for Handicapped Children.

Recreation Club

Volunteers also run the Tuesday Club, a recreation program for retarded adolescent boys at the Boys' Club, two night a week.

Even a relatively youthful group, the Queen Alexandra Solarium Junior League, has suffered a drop in membership in the past few years. Right now it has 26 members, mostly aged 20 to 40.

The junior league has an image problem, said Mrs. Joyce Hayes, one of its members. People shy away from it because they associate it with the Junior League of America, a high society group in the United States.

Up to now, the junior league's activities have been mainly money - raising. Members man a mobile canteen unit on autumn weekends in Goldstream Park, handle coat-checking for all Government House functions, and hold a bazaar in November.

This fall the group is going to start working directly with children in the Solarium. It is organizing a morning play program for pre-school children, which will be run by junior league volunteers.

Victoria General Hospital Ladies' Auxiliary has had other problems besides that of attracting new members.

Volunteers have found working in the hospital "quite difficult at the moment" because of recent turmoil within the hospital, said Mrs. Tom Atkinson, vice-president of the group.

The 40 volunteers who visit patients and man the cart of articles for sale that visits the wards are finding the work too much for them, said Mrs. Atkinson. The auxiliary has asked for a full-time staff member to co-ordinate all volunteer activities.

Biggest volunteer group in the city is the Royal Jubilee Hospital Auxiliary, formed this year when the Woman's Auxiliary to the Royal Jubilee Hospital disbanded and the Junior Auxiliary to the Royal Jubilee Hospital changed its name. It has about 173 active members and 78 associate members.

"We're not a tea party group," said member Mrs. John Pennington.

Promise Work

Every new member must promise to give half a day's work per month in each of the auxiliary's continuing projects — the hospital gift shop, the mobile cart that visits the ward, and its thrift shop on lower Johnson St. The group will also hold a bazaar in November.

The auxiliary's financial contribution to the hospital is substantial — it raised $51,701.44 last year.

"We've found that now they (the hospital) have a regular social service director, a lot is taken off our shoulders," said Mrs. Pennington. Volunteers still visit lonely patients, but actual social work is left to the professionals.

Mrs. Shepperd of the IODE agreed that social work was becoming more a professional concern and less the concern of volunteer groups.

The IODE has long been interested in helping native Canadians. Besides raising money to help IODE projects in the North West Territories, local chapters hope to contribute to the new Victoria Native Friendship Centre that is about to open.

Church women's groups have been spending more time in the community in recent years, and less time cooking church suppers.

"We have now come out of the kitchen," said Mrs. Eileen Sheard, of the United Church Women.

Across the country the UCW is being integrated into the main body of the church, the Presbytery, and shedding its "auxiliary" image. In Victoria Presbytery the two have not yet combined completely, but they have held combined executive meetings.

Anglican Church Women in the city are undertaking a special project of visiting the elderly in nursing homes this winter.

Both these groups, and other church groups work ecumenically on certain community projects.

Hard Times

LONDON (CP) — Housewife Sylvia Simnett reckons suspicious wives ought to know the truth about two-timing husbands. She has invented a "truth detector," a plastic pendululum which swings towards the area where the husband is.

"If he says he's working late and the pendulum swings towards the other side of town, you know he's two-timing," claims Sylvia, 51, who plans to market the device at £2.80. "I know someone who caught her man red-handed with the help of a street map and a fast car," she added.

One Man's Meat . . .

EATING HABITS VARY

LONDON (FWF) — Whoever said that one man's meat is another man's poison certainly knew what he was talking about.

Eating habits throughout the world are largely affected by social, religious and psychological influences — perhaps the latter most of all. Experts on nutrition point out that the food value in the meat of a horse, dog or rat is as high as that in a cow, pig or chicken, but few people in the Western world would be prepared to change to such a diet.

From a Western point of view, menus including oysters, octopus, snails and frogs' legs are acceptable, although considered by some to be slightly adventurous. However, few people in the West would be prepared to eat worms on toast, fried brains in black butter, toasted ants, locusts in sugar sauce, fried bees, mice seasoned with honey, or roast puppy dog, all of which are considered delicacies in other parts of the world.

Food taboos are often logical, some apparently illogical. South Sea islanders refuse to eat sharks and eels because they believe that if they do not, sharks and eels will not eat them. The Jewish and Moslem taboo on pork apparently originated as a reaction against a heathen pig cult — once widespread in Mediterranean countries. It remains because it is felt that pigs have dirty eating habits. But chickens, which also have dirty eating habits, are popular with those who reject pork. Hindus, to whom the cow is sacred, find it difficult to understand the West's fondness for beef steaks.

The strongest food taboos in the West are against dogs and insects. In many parts of the world, dogs are bred for food and in ancient civilizations roasted puppies are considered a great delicacy. As long ago as 1885, experts on the subject were trying to persuade people to eat insects. One 19th century writer stated: "If insects eat all the good things that grow on farms, why not eat the insects and forget about the crops?" He suggested the following menu: snail soup, curried cockchafers, neck of mutton with wireworm sauce, cauliflowers garnished with catepillars, and moths on toast.

No Appeal

This would not appeal to the average gourmet. But it is strange that we are quite prepared to eat "insects" that live in the sea — lobsters, crabs and shrimps, for example. It is said that Julius Caesar's favorite dish was octopus heads stuffed with peppers, pine needles and olive oil. And his soldiers were rather partial to mice seasoned with honey and poppy juice.

The main exception to the insect taboo is honey, which again some might consider strange. The worker bees carry nectar back to the hive and pass it to hive bees who use their saliva to form the product that is placed in the honeycomb. Perhaps we should just eat flowers, as King Henry VIII is supposed to have done. He apparently enjoyed violets chopped with onions and lettuce, and sugared primroses.

Wool Protein

Eventually, all these fads and fancies will become purely academic as scientists all over the world work on ways and means for our bodies to obtain all necessary nutrients from materials such as wool and petrol.

New Zealand scientists have discovered that rats thrive on the edible protein in wool. As Dr. Francis Shorland says: "A good bit of wool is packed with more protein than many a hunk of meat. It can be produced in cake-like form after it has been processed to remove grease and made soluble to eliminate the fibres. This could easily sustain human life."

Investigations in the petroleum industry have led to the production of a protein which tastes like mild-flavoured meat. Hide, feathers, straw and hair also have protein potential and some British experts forecast that within the next 50 years a high proportion of the goods in food stores will be low-priced synthetics. The genuine article will still be available for the old-fashioned food lover, but at fancy prices.

Peach Crepes can be made in advance of mealtime

Peach Crepe Dessert

By MARY MOORE

There were eight baskets of fruit and vegetables waiting for me to do something with them.

I decided to make use of the peaches in some luscious peach crepes. They were so good when we test-tasted them the rest of the produce had to wait while I wrote this column.

PEACH CREPES

(14) (NOTE: See apple variation below)

Thin Pancake Batter:
3 eggs
1 c. milk
½c. plus 1 tbsp. water
1 c. stirred but unsifted all-purpose flour
3 tbsp. sugar
¼ tsp. salt
¾ tsp. vanilla
Butter for frying pan
Peach Syrup:
3 c. hot water
1 c. granulated sugar
2 tbsp. lemon juice
2 sticks cinnamon
4 sliced peaches
4½ tsp. cornstarch
¼c. cold water

Make crepes (thin pancakes) in advance: into a mixing bowl break the eggs and beat slightly to mix then add milk and water, flour, sugar, salt and vanilla and beat with electric mixer or rotary beater until batter is perfectly smooth. If possible allow to stand ½ hour.

In 6" frying pan melt ½ teaspoon butter until it just bubbles, then carefully pour in a scant ¼ cup of batter tilting until it just coats bottom of pan. Cook for 2 or 3 minutes until a delicate gold and dry on top, then flip over and delicately brown other side.

Transfer to icing-sugar-sprinkled platter and roll up. Repeat, adding butter each time, until all batter is made into lovely uniform crepes. You will have 14. (These may be held in refrigerator until mealtime.)

Make syrup by bringing to gentle boil the hot water, sugar, lemon juice and cinnamon sticks for two minutes. Add the sliced peaches and simmer until a little bit soft. Make a smooth paste of cornstarch and cold water and gently stir in until thickened.

Add rolled crepes to syrup pot and bring to gentle boil for one or two minutes. Transfer two crepes to each plate to be served and spoon some hot peach sauce over each. Discard cinnamon sticks. Serve at once.

Apple Variation: Substitute about four cooking apples sliced thin for the peaches (above) and, if desired, add about 20 drops red food colouring to the syrup.

NOTE: Write to Mary Moore, 32 Churchill Ave., Hamilton, Ont., enclosing stamped self-addressed envelope and 10 cents.

Artists' New Goal: Hot Meals, Beverages

NEW GLASGOW, N.S. (CP) — Pictou County artists have pooled their talents to help patients at the Aberdeen Hospital here get hot meals.

Some 35 artists donated paintings to be auctioned off with proceeds going towards a hospital women's auxiliary project. The women are attempting to raise money for some $15,000 worth of equipment which would ensure the serving of hot meals and beverages to patients.

The equipment provides a unitized base for heating and facilities for keeping food and beverages hot for an hour after they leave the dietary floor, for serving to the patients.

You're Batting .500 — Be Thankful for That

DEAR ABBY: I have a daughter-in-law who is lazy, fat and selfish. She takes but never gives. The house is usually a mess and so is she.

Our son has a position which requires him to look nice at all times so he sends his clothes out. He helps her with the meals and with the housework, too. Our little grandson is a handsome child but he looks like a ragamuffin most of the time even though he has plenty of nice clothes.

This daughter-in-law has a violent temper so we stay out of her way as much as possible. She comes over here for free meals, a free babysitter, or to get some sewing done.

Don't tell me she's sick and should see a doctor, psychiatrist or a marriage counselor. She's seen them all.

Every day I say, "Thank you, Lord, for my wonderful son-in-law, but what did I ever do to deserve a daughter-in-law like this?"—Long-Suffering Mother-in-law.

DEAR SUFFERING: You're batting .500, and that's a lot better than other parents who have written to me.

DEAR ABBY: There is a busybody in the office who I call "The Town Crier." She makes it her business to tip everybody off when a co-worker has a gift-giving occasion coming up. (She'll say, "Oh, Patti is having a 30th birthday anniversary next Sunday. I thought maybe you'd like to send her a card or something.")

Abby, to tell you the truth, I would be just as happy not knowing, but after she tells me I'm put on the spot. So what do I do?—On The Spot.

DEAR ON: Say, "thank you," and then do as you please. There is always a chance that some co-workers appreciate knowing, so don't label "The Town Crier" a "busybody."

Hospital Routine

I've been in hospital now a full eight weeks. And in those weeks I've had many experiences.

Some have been sad. Others almost hilariously funny. All have been shared by those in beds around me and by nurses who know how to laugh if the occasion arises and at the same time give sympathetic attention to patient needs.

Take for instance the night at Nanaimo when a very much confused elderly gentleman was admitted and placed in a two bed ward not far from mine.

Wore Cap

Every once in awhile he'd get up, put on a dapper green sports cap and wander down the hall in his pyjamas, intent on finding his way out of the hospital.

In his confused state of mind, the elevator seemed to be non-existent so he would finally turn back toward his room.

Trouble was, by then all wards looked alike to him and as mine was the first along that end of the corridor, invariably he turned in there.

Shuffling his way toward the window he'd end up bumping into my bed.

That waked me. I'd sit up and tell him he was in the wrong room. Instead of helping, this seemed to add to his confusion.

"Who are you?" he'd ask. And by the tone of his voice it was easy to guess he thought it was me who was in the wrong room. Not him.

By then a night nurse would appear and lead him out and along the corridor to the place where he belonged.

Then she'd come back, poke her head in my door and in a stage whisper advise me to "keep those railings up or you'll have him in bed with you."

Then there was the day a woman with a broken foot was brought in from emergency and placed in the bed next to mine.

She was told she must stay in hospital overnight as the foot was so swollen, nothing could be done to set it until morning as the very earliest.

Immediately she began to protest. She couldn't stay in hospital overnight. In fact, she wouldn't stay, she said.

Nurses suggested she phone the neighbors and ask them to care for the little girl. Neighbors were away, the woman insisted, and anyway they wouldn't know what her little girl would eat. She had to go home.

A doctor appeared on the scene to tell her the foot was badly smashed. She could not stand on it and she must stay until it was properly set.

No Change

That didn't change a thing. She was going home. Get her a taxi . . . get her a taxi!

Finally it was agreed that if she would sign a paper saying she was leaving the hospital of her own accord and at her own risk, she could go.

This was quickly done. She was bundled into a wheelchair and taken away to the elevator.

Only when all the ranting and raving was over and the paper signed, did it come out that the "darling little girl", all alone in the house, was an eight-year-old cocker spaniel.

Me? I'm now in Royal Jubilee Hospital. Transferred here three weeks ago. Surgery on my brokn bones is completed . . . I hope. Therapy is about to start in earnest. So, it shouldn't be many more weeks until I'm back in my own apartment and walking again.

The 12-page miniature booklet Fire Prevention and Safety in the Home (Prevention des incendies et Securite au foyer) lists 60 points against which you should check every room in your home from cellar to attic.

The booklet also offers valuable advice. For instance, if you want to smother a grease fire in a pan, cover it with a tight lid or throw salt on it.

Also, if a smoky smell wakes you during the night, test your bedroom door before you open it. If it feels very hot, don't open it because smoke and heat could kill you. Don't jump from the window. If at all possible, wait for help. If you leave the room, close the door behind you to prevent the fire from spreading.

Ovens Affect Device

DENVER (UPI) — The microwave oven may be a timesaver to the busy housewife and a money-maker for the restaurant owner. But to Thomas E. Dick, they only strike a note of terror.

The 22-year-old Northglenn, Colo., man recalls walking into a restaurant not long ago and seeing two of the ovens behind a counter. He left quickly after telling a clerk not to turn them on.

The reason for his fear of microwave ovens is a pacemaker, a tiny electronic device which Dick wears just under his right collarbone. The instrument makes sure his heart will beat in a safe, steady rhythm.

Although some of the newer models of pacemakers are specially shielded against electrical and microwave interference, Dick has an older one — one which might stop if it is exposed to microwave leakage.

Denver cardiologist Dr. Murray S. Hoffman said the pacemakers — which are used to bolster a diseased heart's natural electrical impulse system — are vulnerable to electrical interference because they operate on a "demand" basis.

"The pacemaker turns itself off when ever it senses that the patient's own heart rhythm is working suitably," he said. "The waves from a leaking microwave oven fool the device into thinking the heart is working OK, and it shuts off."

Top Sculptor Was Late Starter

MONTREAL (CP) — Alice Winant is one of Canada's busiest sculptors. She is able to sell more than she is able to produce, although she does not measure her success in commercial terms.

Prime Minister Trudeau owns one of her pieces. Others either adorn her suburban Hampstead home or the celebrated Musee Rodin in Paris.

Her works are jaunty men or soft, stylistic nudes in polished bronze; they reveal more than anything her gifts of spontaneity and a continuous meditation on life.

Talent exposed itself in Alice Winant late in life.

She has spent the last 25 years trying to forget the horrors of Nazi concentration camps such as Auschwitz and Bergen-Belsen during the Second World War.

There have been many things to think about and Alice Winant has done a lot of thinking.

She was born in the small town of Targu Mures, Romania, where her father was a grain merchant. By the time she was 18, she had established her own portrait and fashion photography studio.

But one day the Nazis came and led the family away — the price of being Jewish.

Alice, her mother and sister went one way, her brother and father went the other.

Her father died in the ovens of Dachau; she, her mother and sister stayed together at both Auschwitz and Bergen-Belsen. Her job was to lug sacks of potatoes from trucks.

"The funny thing is that when you have to do these things, you can," she said.

"You seem to find tremendous strength."

At one point, Alice became too ill to stand up each morning and be counted by the guards. When her mother and sister lacked the strength to hold her up, she was allowed to lie in front of her barracks.

"How they forgot to kill me I'll never know," she said.

Three times her mother was selected for the gas chamber; three times she was reprieved. And when British troops finally liberated Bergen-Belsen in 1945, Alice was removed by the Red Cross to Stockholm where she spent two years in a body cast from her armpits to her knees.

Alice's husband, Edward, sat on the sofa listening as his wife talked. He's a Montreal building contractor — a substantial and affectionate man who confessed he wept when he first heard his wife's story.

MET SCULPTOR

In the Swedish hospital it was, ironically, a German nurse who changed Alice's life. She noticed the sick girl always selected art books from the library and introduced Alice to the Swedish sculptor Carl Hedvig who showed up at her bedside with a lump of ceramic clay.

"Create me something," the nurse said.

Alice did, moulding a crude foot which she still has today.

But the talent lay dormant — through a marriage to Rudolph Blonberg shortly after she came to Canada 18 years ago, after he died and until she married Edward Winant seven years ago.

Not until five years ago, after a trip to San Francisco, did she complete her first major work, a bust of her husband.

British Would 'Adjust' to Nazis: Mike

By CAROL KENNEDY

LONDON (CP) — Former prime minister Lester Pearson was seen on British television Tuesday night giving his opinion that if Britain had fallen to a Nazi invasion in 1940, those in authority here would have had to "come to terms" with the German occupation force.

The interview with Pearson came in the last part of a three-hour BBC documentary entitled If Britain Had Fallen, which set out to examine how Britons might have behaved in the event of a Nazi occupation such as befell Western Europe and the Channel Islands.

In answer to a question, Pearson said he did not think the British people would have compromised with the invaders, but added: "Anyone responsible for the security of the people would have had to come to terms. The alternative would have been extermination."

Asked if he thought there were any weak points in the British character which might have given way under such an experience, Pearson said there was a "smugness and complacency" that Britain could not be beaten. Reliance on this might have led to a refusal to take the steps necessary to adapt to such circumstances.

Also seen in the program was Canadian Privy Counsellor M. J. Coldwell, a founder and former chief of the CCF party. Referring to contingency plans to send the Royal Family and an exiled war cabinet out of England, Coldwell said he thought it would have been "embarrassing" to have had the King in Canada.

It would have made it difficult for a governor-general to continue, for one thing. The Royal Family would not have been encouraged to seek refuge in Canada, Coldwell concluded.

The program included reconstructed shots of Britain's gold reserves and £1 billion in securities being stowed in the vaults of the Sun Life building in Montreal.

"Barely a handful of people knew" of this arrangement, said the program's commentator and part-author, Lord Chalfont. A former defence correspondent of The Times, Chalfont served as a junior foreign minister in Harold Wilson's Labor government.

Mexican Funds Linked With Secret Nixon Gifts

WASHINGTON (AP) — Money from Mexico linked to the Watergate affair was part of $700,000 in secret Nixon campaign gifts stuffed into a suitcase and rushed to Washington in an oil company plane last spring, says a confidential House of Representatives staff report.

The document, distributed Tuesday night to members of the House banking committee, also said a southwestern fund raiser for the president's campaign had contradicted denials of involvement with the Mexican transactions by chief Nixon fund raiser Maurice H. Stans.

Committee investigators said they were unable to determine whether the money — $100,000 in all — actually came from Mexicans or from U.S. citizens living in that country.

But they said that on the surface it appeared the money was from foreign nationals and, if that is true, accepting it is a violation of U.S. banking laws.

The 58-page report, compiled during the last several weeks, both adds to the bizarre developments in the Democratic headquarters bugging case and vividly describes last-minute efforts by Nixon fund raisers to beat the April deadline of a new elections law requiring full disclosure of campaign donors.

Despite a stern warning by committee Chairman Wright Patman, Dem. Tex. against releasing the report, a copy was obtained by columnist Jack Anderson who made it available to The Associated Press.

Senator George McGovern has seized on the bugging case and the question of an anonymous $10 million contributed to Nixon before the new law took effect April 7, making them a major issue in his campaign for president.

A new disclosure in the report is that a total of $100,000 came from Mexico. Previously it was known that $89,000 linked to the Watergate affair was made up of four cheques drawn on a Mexican bank.

The report provides the first account to challenge the original contention of Stans that he knew nothing about transfer of the funds which came from or passed through Mexico.

THE GALLUP POLL

Trudeau Popularity Up in East, Down in West

By The Canadian Institute of Public Opinion

Voter opinion of Prime Minister Trudeau appears to have firmed during recent months, as half the public say that their attitude towards him had remained unchanged over the past six months. About a third say that their opinion had gone down, while for one in 10 it had gone up — about a three to one ratio.

Trudeau has increased his popularity most in Ontario, where 16% report a higher opinion of him than they had previously. This compares to about 8% in other areas of Canada. Conversely he has lost in popularity to the greatest degree in the West, where 41% say they think less of him in recent months than they did. In Ontario and Quebec this level is about 31%; in the Maritimes, 36%.

The same check on public attitudes was made in the Fall of 1969, the year after Trudeau was first elected to office. A comparison of the results shows that the PM has lost stature to about the same degree as he did in the previous study, but that those who have not changed their opinion has increased from about four in 10 to five in 10. This year 10% say they think more of him than they did — while in 1968 this level was at 18%.

As compared to 1969, the PM has lost favor to a somewhat higher degree among French-speaking, than English Canadians. In French Canada, at that time, 22% of the French-Canadian people said their opinion of him had gone up, as compared to 8% this year. In the previous study 16% of the English-speaking voters had a higher opinion of Trudeau; this year the level is 11%. In 1969, the proportion among French-Canadians who said they held a lower opinion of the PM was 19%; now it has risen to 32%. These levels in English Canada show that, on the contrary the proportion of those who say "Gone Down" is slightly lower now in English Canada, than it was about three years ago.

The question, put to a national sample of about 700 adults, in personal, at home interviews in mid-July, was the same as that used in 1969.

Has your opinion of Prime Minister Trudeau gone up, or gone down in the past six months?"

The table below compares national attitudes, and those among English and French-speaking Canadians today, with those in 1969. It also reveals regional attitudes today.

	GONE UP	GONE DOWN	THE SAME	CAN'T SAY
Nov. 1969	18%	35%	41%	6%

Parisiens Urge Limit

PARIS (Reuter) — Booming Paris is waking up to a giant hangover—some of the city's finest views are being lost in a hectic building spree.

Since its erection in tribute to Napoleon's armies more than a century ago, the 164-foot-high Arc de Triomphe has stood majestically alone on the sky-line at the top of the tree-lined avenue.

Now it is overlooked by a 557-foot-high office block being built for an insurance company some two miles way.

Amid growing protests against the changes sweeping across the romantic Paris skyline, the city council is considering the introduction of new controls on high-rise buildings.

Men's Club Invites Boys

Four high school students will be guests of the Men's Canadian Club at each of its luncheon meetings this season.

Belmont Senior Secondary School will be the first of the eight schools in the area to participate on Sept. 18. The boys will be picked up by car and returned to the school in each case.

The plan is part of the Canadian Club's program of interesting youth in Canadian affairs Brig.-Gen. J. B. Clement, president, said. The Club already sponsors local school classes in attending sessions of the citizenship court, when new Canadians are sworn in as citizens.

Opening meeting of the club will be held Sept. 18 at noon in the Empress. John Straiton, president of Ogilvy and Mather (Canada), who is also known as a sculptor, painter and film-maker in addition to his work in creative management, will speak on the subject: "The consumer is not a moron, she's your wife." He will deal with advertising myths of the '70s.

Church Course Cancelled: Catholics Switch

TORONTO (CP) — Trustee Fiona Nelson said Tuesday attendance at some public schools is being desreased because children are being transferred to Roman Catholic separate schools after priests told parents weekly confirmation classes were to be halted.

The classes were held for the benefit of Roman Catholic children attending public schools.

"Confirmation is a very big event, especially among Italian and Portuguese families," Mrs. Nelson said.

More Animals For Adoption

Animals are still available to the public at Q Kennels, 21 Atkins Rd., contrary to a report Monday in the Times.

The report said Mother Cecilia, who operates an animal shelter at Mill Bay, had taken the remaining animals from the kennel after it was forced to close. However, proprietors of the kennel said Tuesday there are still animals to be taken.

Canadian Firms Win $4.5M Space Contracts

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian domestic communications satellite peogram has helped two Canadian aerospace manufacturing companies win contracts worth $4.5 million in a United States satellite effort, says Paul Visher, a top official in Hughes Aircraft Co. of California.

Mr. Visher, assistant group executive in the Hughes space and communications group, told reporters that the contracts were awarded to Spar Aerospace Products Ltd. of Toronto and Northern Eelectric Co. Ltd. of Montreal largely because of a contract with Hughes on the Anik satellite project.

Anik, the world's first domestic communications satellite, is scheduled to be launched in November. The satellite will provide broadcasting and telecommunications service throughout Canada.

Mr. Visher told a news conference in Communications Minister Robert Stanbury's office that the Anik contract with Spar and Northern Electric provided that the Canadian companies would have the right to bid competitively on U.S. satellite contracts sought by Hughes.

Mr. Visher said contracts worth $4 million more may be given to Spar and Northern Electric within the next three or four months to help build components for U.S. communications satellites.

The Western Union satellite is being built by Hughes for more than $21 million. It is similar to the Anik satellite which was awarded to Hughes for about $30 million.

Mr. Visher said one reason for the lower figure for Western Union is that the U.S. satellite is so much like Anik that current production lines can keep rolling.

Under current Western Union contracts, Spar will build the satellite structure for $350,775 while Northern Eelctric will construct the electronic components, transmitters and receivers for $4.2 million.

Opened Door to China Shatters U.S. Attitudes

By JOHN GITTINGS
(The Manchester Guardian)

LONDON — Tens of thousands of applications for visas to Peking have been filed in the past year by citizens of the United States. Or so it is believed in American China circles, where the rush to Peking's nearest embassy in Ottawa continues unabated.

It is a competitive world, and notes are jealously compared. Did the Chinese in Ottawa give a cup of tea? Or, more significantly, did they recognize B's name?

Only a couple of hundred or so, out of all the thousands of applicants, have made it so far, but the China scene in America is already quite transformed.

China-visiting may not be such a novelty in Europe, and to the outsider there is something slightly off-putting about the way in which some Americans seem to think they have taken out a patent on the People's Republic of China.

But in a country which has for so long denied itself access to the "mainland" (the old terminologies die hard), the effect of suddenly being able to quaff Mao-Tai spirit wine with Premier Chou En-Lai is simply shattering.

Three different China-oriented groups in the United States have reacted in three different ways to the opening-up of China. What they have in common is that they have all been turned upside down by the experience.

These three groups are the liberal establishment of scholars and journalists, the dissenting minority of revisionists and radicals, and the American Chinese (these last tend to get forgotten in most discussions of China's impact on the United States).

To put it crudely, the liberal China scholars have been outsmarted by Richard Milhous Nixon, and many of them now seem to feel thoroughly bemused.

For years they have been taking the gradualist approach, composing memoranda for their friends in Washington, using this or that modest step forward, usually involving some new twist to a two-Chinas policy. Only one leading scholar, to my knowledge, publicly stated that Taiwan was part of China before Nixon conceded the point in the Shanghai communique.

The liberal scholars also clung to all kinds of explanations to explain Chinese foreign policy in ideological-cum-cultural terms. Peking was "obsessed" by its doctrine, or else it "needed" a foreign enemy, or else it suffered from delayed cultural shock at the "impact of the West."

All these assumptions have been shattered in the past year. First, Nixon has scored his home run to Peking before the scholars even got to first base, outstripping all their gradualist recommendations on the way. And secondly, the Chinese have turned out to be quite remarkably "pragmatic" in their foreign policy, prompting the thought that perhaps they were less "ideological" all along.

Peking has also contributed in a different way to this general sense of disorientation among th Sinologists. Almost everyone who visits China from the United States is impressed by the vitality and activism of a socialist society at the grassroots level of commune or factory floor. Yet how can this be squared with whispers of conspiracy, the downfall of Lin Piao, and dissension in the upper levels of leadership?

During the cultural revolution, the China experts were ready enough to rush on to the media and provide creative explanations of what was going on. Today they report that the Chinese are well-fed, that the hotels are comfortable, that to visit China is a deeply moving experience, but on the whole they stay clear of the politics.

The younger generation of radical China scholars have also been turned upside down by the events of the past year, but perhaps with a more positive effect.

Their organization, the Committee of Concerned Asian Scholars (CCAS), has sent two delegations to China, the first in July, 1971, and the second in May this year. While in China, the first group had suggested a return visit by Chinese students to the United States.

Yet at the annual CCAS conference in March, this invitation was hotly opposed by many who felt unhappy at the way Sino-American relations were blossoming while Nixon still escalated the war in Vietnam. The visit would also involve the CCAS in distasteful but necessary contacts with the state department to ensure the safety of their Chinese guests. So by way of compromise it was decided to pass on responsibility for this visit to the less politically minded American Friends Service Committee.

It is not just Vietnam which has caused some soul-searching among radical scholars, but the fact that they are no longer obliged to defend China against all comers. The myth of Chinese expansionism, after all, has been demolished by Nixon himself; the view that the United States may have something to learn from China's socialist society has almost become a cliche among the "straight" communicators in the press and on television. Perhaps the Chinese, as more than one CCAS scholar remarked to me, can now look after themselves.

West Germany Extends Feelers Toward Peking

BONN (Reuter) — West Germany's olive-branch "ostpolitik" of detente with Eastern Europe is stretching across the Urals and into China, with diplomatic relations between Bonn and Peking possibly only a matter of weeks away.

Foreign Minister Walter Scheel has said it is possible he could be in Peking next month to wind up the negotiations about these ties.

From the West German point of view, many benefits will accrue from an exchange of ambassadors between the two countries far apart ideologically as they are geographically, yet both emerging as political giants.

Trade between the two ran to $375 million in 1971, below the level of the two previous years but still high enough to keep West Germany as China's second largest trade partner—despite the fact that they are operating without a formal trade agreement.

China itself is showing increasing interest in Europe both for economic and political reasons. The powerful economic position of West Germany within the European Common Market probably is an important factor in the thinking of the Chinese leaders, who are apparently as eager as Bonn to settle the question of recognition quickly.

Quasar Theory Checked

OTTAWA (TNS) — Are quasars really on the very edges of our universe and therefore unusually powerful star-like objects?

Or are quasars much closer to our galaxy in distance and make-up, merely violating the astronomer's long-time rule of thumb for determining distances, the so-called "red shift" phenomenon?

Astronomers at the Algonquin Radio Observatory in Algonquin Park, Ont. and at a smaller radio observatory at Chilbolton, near London, England, have recently joined together in an experiment to try and uncover some answers to these puzzling questions.

And the answers will inevitably have a bearing on the broader scientific issues of how our universe was formed and how it is now made up and changing.

Using a sophisticated technique called long baseline interferometry, first perfected by Canadians, the astronomers in the two countries are synchronizing their two radio telescopes to look simultaneously at selected quasars.

The technique markedly increases the resolution the scientists can obtain in studying distant objects. And they hope to be able to detect structures and in particular, changes in structures in the objects they observe during the next year.

With long baseline interferometry and by receiving a higher frequency of radio waves, the scientists calculate they can detect what is comparable to seeing a marble in England with a telescope from Canada.

Sudan's Chief Unafraid

KHARTOUM, Sudan (AP) — The solitary man behind the oars in the rowboat off the Blue Nie Sailing Club was Maj.-Gen. Gaafar Mohammed Numeiry, target of at least four coup attempts and one attempted assassination.

Within the last year Numeiry has emerged as one of Africa's most dynamic leaders, and one of its least protected.

Since mid-July, 1971, he has staged a successful counter-coup, resuming the leadership he assumed in a coup of his own in May, 1969; been elected president; brought peace to Sudan for the first time in 17 years; and established a broad new foreign policy.

Internal development, he says, is more important than taking sides internationally.

His country, the largest geographically in Africa, has more than four million black of dark-skinned persons among its 15 million population. Many of the others speak Arabic and are Moslems.

Internal unity depends on mutual trust, Numeiry says.

His independent foreign policy earned the wrath of the Egyptian press in July when he formally re-established ties with the United States.

In ending a 17-year-old civil war last spring by granting limited regional autonomy to the south, he won a place in Sudanese history books. Leaders said the move was as significant as Sudan's independence in 1956.

By successfully appealing for international help for the war-ravaged south, he is providing relief Sudan's limited resources could not offer.

His country borders on eight others, including Chad, Libya, Egspt and Ethiopia.

Within the last year he has improved relations with all his neighbors, agreeing to ban rebel movements operating from Sudan against Chad and Ethiopia, in return for similar agreements; reopening the border with Uganda for the first time in five years; and receiving visits by Libya's Col. Muammar Kadafi and Egypt's President Anwar Sadat.

He journeyed repeatedly to south Sudan, unarmed, with boy scouts providing crowd control, to explain the peace agreement this spring to thousands of spear-waving warriors.

"To have been armed, or had an armed escort, would have defeated the purpose of the trip," an aide explained to an accompanying reporter.

Twice arrested in plots to overthrow previous Sudanese governments, Numeiry staged his own coup in May, 1969, faced down at least two attempts to oust him since then, and came back to power after an abortive three-day pro-Communist coup in July, 1971.

British Theatre Looks Healthy

By HAROLD HOBSON

LONDON (CP) — Two developments in recent years are likely to exercise grat influence upon the British theatre.

One, made possible by large national and local subsidies, is the building of elaborate playhouses in such cities as Sheffield, Nottingham, Bristol and Birmingham. The other, which may turn out even more significant, is the springing up in London and its suburbs of small companies of enthusiasts, working for almost nothing, who give 45-minute performances during the lunch hour. About 40 such companies work in London.

This equals the number of theatres in the West End. Thus in a sense the theatrical resources of London have been doubled since 1970.

The actors have great enthusiasm and perhaps hope that some manager or influential critic will see them and be impressed by their work. If little money is spent on them, still less is available for stage accessories. The best that can be hoped for in the way of scenery is a shabby table or chair.

COMPETE WITH DRINKS

The performances are usually given in the back room of public houses, with the audience drinking and munching during the shows.

Since the death of the music hall, entertainers have been able to count on the total attention of their audiences. In music halls artists had to compete with the chatter of barmaids and their customers; now in these lunchtime theatres the competition is the necessity for the patrons to get a meal down before it is time to go back to work.

The plays therefore must be short, written in one act; they must be simple, requiring few accessories; since there is little in the way of scenery to attract the eye they must provide strong acting parts to seize the audience's imagination. They also have to achieve a considerable dramatic effect speedily, since time is short and food and drink are powerful counter-attractions.

These conditions are not easy to fulfil. Hitherto there has been little scope for one-act plays and no school of one-act dramatists exists. The plays had to be manufactured practically unaided by the companies.

True, one or two short plays by the late Joe Orton have been available; and Tom Stoppard, author of Rosencrantz and Guildenstern are Dead and the great National Theatre success Jumpers, has actually written a brief piece for one of these companies, the Almost Free Theatre. It was a knockout farce of a simplistic nature, about men building a wall and throwing bricks for each other to catch.

WRITERS ADAPT

This shows the readiness of major dramatists to adapt themselves to new conditions. Stoppard is probably the most subtle and linguistically intricate of living British dramatists, yet for the Almost Free Theatre—so called because it makes no charge for admission but asks the audience to contribute what it thinks the entertainment is worth—he wrote a short play whose jokes were no more complicated than those of a Mack Sennett bathing beauty comedy.

So did Peter Nichols, the author of A Day in the Death of Joe Egg. His contribution was called Neither Up nor Down and, like most of his work, was a variation, this time farcical, on the theme of marital difficulties.

Though the intervention of men like Nichols and Stoppard has done much to give status to these one-act entertainments it is a novelist, William Trevor, whose work is little known to theatregoers, who has concentrated the attention on them of all dramatic London.

In discovering William Trevor the one-act play movement has made a great contribution to contemporary theatre.

Cancer Cured, Turk Family Reunited

MONTREAL — Thirteen months ago, Aysan Karacaer sent her only child to live with her parents in Turkey because she could not afford a babysitter while supporting a husband suffering from what was thought to be incurable cancer. Monday night, the mother and child were reunited at Montreal International Airport. "He doesn't want to come to me," Mrs. Karacaer said. "He says he's afraid, he's such a big boy now." Karem, 2, will be staying in a day-care centre while his mother works on an assembly line. Karacaer, his throat cancer cured by radium treatment, is taking drafting courses. The couple, who emigrated from Turkey to Waterloo, Ont., five years ago, sent the boy to Turkey because they did not know whether the cancer could be cured. The boy's return trip was made possible by the Canadian Cancer Society in Kitchenty. "I feel sad for my mother," said Mrs. Karacaer, holding Karem. "She said she was upset to see him leave, she was so used to having him around. But she understands, he's my baby."

NOTTINGHAM, England — Tony Fitzpatrick, 22, has rented a furniture truck to transport him in a hospital bed to his wedding Friday. Fitzpatrick, who has been laid up in a hospital with a broken leg, said the bed will be wheeled up to the alter where he will marry Lynda Hudspeth, 19.

VATICAN CITY — Vatican radio said Saturday night veteran actor Alec Guinness has become a Roman Catholic because of his son's recovery from polio. The broadcast said Guinness attributed it to a miracle. Matthew Guinness was stricken when he was five and confined to a wheelchair. Doctors said they were unable to do anything for him, the broadcast said. In 1970, while making a movie in Rome, the actor walked into a Catholic church and prayed for his son's recovery. When he returned to London, the broadcast said, Guinness was greeted at the airport by his son who was still in a wheelchair but able for the first time to manoeuvre it himself. Some days after that, the radio said, Matthew was able to walk. The broadcast said doctors who examined Matthew had no medical explanation for his recovery. The actor called it a "true miracle," the radio said. The broadcast said the 58-year-old actor has been baptized in the Catholic Church.

CAMBRIDGE, England — Reginald Jakes drove his new sedan up to the local police station, took careful aim and rammed the car into the building's steel-plated front doors.

Then he reversed the car and did it again, again, and again.

The doors buckled inwards. Police inside, thinking a bomb had exploded, rushed outside. Before police arrested him Jakes, 38, told them he did it for revenge. He said police had thrown him out of a local pub several days earlier after he smashed some whisky bottles.

CHESTERFIELD, England — Police broke into Len Marsh's apartment early one morning last week after a neighbor reported seeing flashing lights through the apartment's bedroom window and hearing strange buzzing noises.

Marsh, 47, a factory worker, told police it was only his alarm clock, which triggers two flashing lights and set off a loug buzzer. He said he needs the clock to wake him for work.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. — Men who won fame for their proficiency in killing each other will txchange champagne toasts this weekend, at the 11th annual reunion of the American Fighter Aces association.

Six fighter pilot aces from Japan who fought in the Second World War will attend the reunion, according to Tex Hill, the aces association chairman.

Hill, who shot down 18 Japanese war planes himself, said he is honored his former enemies from Japan have accepted the invitation.

BROWNFIELD, Tex. — Residents in West Texas communities in the Lubbock-Brownfield area have collected about 220,000 pounds of paper worth $2,000 for Jerry Wilson, 20, a kidney patient.

Wilson, whose wife is expecting their first child in October, has been living in Galveston, Tex., on the coast, where a special machine at John Sealy Hospital does the job his diseased kidneys used to do. But the machine is expensive and when word got back to Wilson's hometown that his money was running out area residents decided to help.

LOS ANGELES — Entertainer Ann-Margret must undergo surgery for injuries suffered in a 30-foot fall off a stage platform. She has five bone fractures in her face, a broken jaw, a concussion and a broken left arm and is reported in "stable" condition at UCLA medical centre.

Miss Margret, 31, fell from a platform used to hoist her to stage level just before the curtain opening of her show early Monday at the Sahara-Tahoe Hotel in Stateline, Nev. with her husband, producer-actor Roger Smith, she was flown to Los Angeles in a private air ambulance.

CINCINNATI, Ohio — The Ohio grand dragon of the United Klans of America, a militant outgrowth of the Ku Klux Klan, said Monday all Klan members in the United States and Canada will have to take lie-detector tests because of alleged government infiltration attempts.

Jim Harris said: "Twenty-two states have purchased polygraph machinery and we in Ohio will have a machine in about two weeks."

"The first purpose" of the tests, Harris said, "is this informants business. We have to fight the FBI first. Then we can start on other goals." Harris said infiltrators, when caught, will face punishment.

DETOUR RE-ROUTES FISHING BUSINESS

COWICHAN BAY — Business in the Cowichan Bay area is being killed due to a detour sign to build sewers on the waterfront claim businessmen.

Fish are in the bay, they say, but not the fishermen. The bay businessmen feel that the detour barrier three quarters of a mile south of the bay stating "local traffic only" is driving out-of-town fishermen away.

The detour sign has been on the Cowichan Bay Road for a week and construction is expected to continue on the sewer laterals for several more weeks.

Doug Allen, owner of the Bayshore Marina, said the detour sign has killed business as many of the fishermen who come to the Bay use the south road.

LAMBERT

"Business has absolutely dried up," he said. "Normally August is the best money but we should still have a pretty good business here. It's a shame to see the fishing so good and no one here."

Allen said the spring salmon run this year is one of the best he can remember.

"There are more springs out there than I have ever seen at any one time," he said.

Peter Lambert, owner of the Anchor Marina, said he can't understand why a detour sign would be placed there, especially when traffic can get through from the other end.

Traffic coming from the south can reach the bay waterfront without meeting any construction activity, which is at the north end of the business section.

The sign is removed at five each evening and also on weekends.

Board Approves Hall, School Shift to End

DUNCAN — The shift at the Crofton Elementary School will be removed if the community association there agrees to rent its hall for a $800 settlement for a 10-month period, the school board decided Monday evening.

Cowichan School District Trustees made the decision after being advised by Maintenance Supervisor George Routley that between $550 to $600 would have to be spent to upgrade the hall's dining room before it would be suitable for a classroom.

He advised trustees that the lighting in the room is "hopelessly inadequate and creates a lot of shadows. It has to be updated. The wiring in that portion of the building does not apparently meet the current codes. There is no adequate shelving space and no chalk or tack boards. The fire exits are not adequate and in addition we had a report previously that the lavatories are not acceptable under the public health authorities for continued basis."

Routley's $600 estimate for renovations does not include improvements to the community hall's lavatories because trustees agreed that the students could use the school's facilities that are immediately adjacent.

The discussion of removing the shifts of grade six and seven students at the school was introduced at the meeting by five Crofton residents, who were representing more than 50 concerned parents. They feel Crofton always gets "the short end of the stick."

The parents called a meeting last Wednesday and agreed to ask the school board to rent the community hall's dining room rather than have the students remain on shift. At that time they were advised the shift is only temporary until a four-classroom pod, which is currently under construction, can be completed. Board officials hope it will be ready for use by Easter.

The main complaint by many parents is that 28 of the students were on shift last year as grade six students.

Mel Schmidt, spokesman for the group Monday evening as well as chairman of the community association, said the hall's dining room could be rented for $70 a month.

School trustees are hoping that the association will see fit to have the required renovations offset a rental charge because the changes will mean improvements to the hall.

A decision will be made at the association's general meeting in Crofton Thursday evening.

Trustees have also agreed to look into renting the Anglican Church hall in Crofton for kindergarten children rather than having them transported by parents to the Westholme school three miles away.

The only trustee to disagree with the change is Dave Haywood who feels kindergarten is a "convenience rather than a necessity.

"I doubt if there are less than one or two per cent of the kindergarten students that live within walking distance of their school."

Haywood said the problem will be alleviated at Easter with the completion of the new pod because kindergarten facilities are included in the plans.

Hog Fuel Dump Denied

The provincial government's land use committee has turned down a request by Doman Industries Ltd. of Duncan to dump hog fuel at its Quamichan site.

The decision was carried in a cabinet order released Tuesday, and follows a public hearing on the matter June 15.

BUS BOOST LIKELY

DUNCAN — Two more buses may be added to the Cowichan School Districts fleet, trustees decided Monday.

The additional buses, which would bring the fleet up to 12 large and two smaller buses, are to supply transportation to Chemainus students. The students are currently transported by a local company on a contract basis which expires at the end of December.

Rather than renew the contract trustees feel using their own buses would make the burden lighter, Transportation chairman Lorne Campbell said the district should either completely contract busing or go completely owner-operator.

Trustees feel they should receive financing assistance for the purchase of the buses from the Department of Education because the need is a direct result of the amalgamation of Chemainus into the school district at the beginning of August.

Campbell said that all the present buses in the district are operating at a maximum carrying capacity.

Chess to Fill Winter Nights

DUNCAN — Chess has come to the Cowichan School District's Adult Education classes.

Enthusiasts are encouraged to attend classes at the Cowichan Senior Secondary School each Monday and Thursday evening.

Bill Novis, one of the instructors, feels that the general public is taking more interest in the ancient game. Novis said there have always been small chess groups in the city but they have had little contact with each other in the past.

Angry Wife Gives Bruno Headache

When a scavenging bear keeps dropping in for a sniff around the garbage cans, any housewife can reasonably be expected to lose her cool.

But when the questing quadruped comes prowling while her toddler\son is playing in the yard, it's enough to make a woman hopping mad.

At least, it is if you happen to be Mrs. Laura Betts, you've no fear of animals and you happen to live in an isolated logging community in northern Vancouver Island where help may not be too readily at hand.

It took several blows for the bear to get the message but he finally did and went on his way, with a headache for his trouble.

The incident made headlines in the little news sheet published in Mahatta River, north of Port Alice, where Laura's husband works, and she also mentioned it in a letter to her mother, Mrs. Lillian Erwin, of 1913 Jerome Road, Victoria.

Mrs. Erwin said the bear in question had been a nuisance for some time. On that particular day her daughter caught him trying to get into the yard — "through the gate, yet" — where 16-month-old Chad was playing.

"She became so angry she just grabbed the nearest thing to hand and started to beat him over the head. He took off but she still chased him."

As word of the incident spread through the community men cam to help in tracking the animal which was finally shot, Mrs. Erwin said.

She said her son-in-law was upset at the risk his wife had taken, particularly as the bear had foam around its mouth.

"If it had been me I would have grabbed the child and run like heck," Mrs. Erwin said. "But Laura's like that -- very impulsive."

New Location For Fall Show

Look for this year's fall show of the Victoria Horticultural Society at a new location Friday and Saturday.

The show will be set up in the First United Church Hall, 932 Balmoral Road.

On Friday from 2 to 10 p.m. you have the opportunity of seeing a lot of fall color in one spot, without travelling more than a few blocks from the centre of Victoria.

Visitors will find the show open again on Saturday from 10 a.m. until 8 p.m. with an auction of donated exhibits held at 8:15 p.m.

Here's a fine chance for color photography particularly by timing your visit for the first hour of Saturday's opening, or between 5 and 6:30 on either Friday or Saturday.

Not only will we expect to see the flowers of fall displayed in competition, but also the good things to eat produced by amateur gardeners here.

Viewing the plates of beans, the cabbages, onions, potatoes, squash fruits and probably even some bush ripened tomatoes, will be sufficient encouragement for any newcomer to start a vegetable garden this fall. You can begin preparations before the ground is too wet for working.

Noting the tree fruits, grapes and other kinds displayed with variety names will simplify decisions on what trees to buy this fall for planting.

Early apples and pears are fine for abundant eating and cooking before the end of September. The later varieties keep well if your house has the facilities.

Not so long ago, special fruit storage houses were built adjacent to dwellings. These were followed by converting a corner of the basement into cool, ventilated storage for garden produce. Today there is seldom even a basement, or a cool spot in one.

Remember this when selecting tree fruit varieties.

Culinary herbs, African violets and other pot plants round out what should be a good fall show.

To visit for an hour or two may start you on the way to gardening in Victoria, or to exhibiting what you already are growing.

SOLUTION THURSDAY

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

Generally speaking, a declarer will gather in the adversely-held trumps as soon as possible. The reason, of course, is that if one leaves the defenders' trumps outstanding, there exists the risk that one of declarer's winners might be ruffed.

But many situations arise where declarer has a greater use for either his own or dummy's trumps than to use them merely as extractors. One of these uses is illustrated in today's deal. The hand came up in a rubber-bridge game.

Neither side vulnerable. South deals.

NORTH
♠ K J 7
♡ 8 6 2
◇ Q 3

WEST
♡ A K Q 5
◇ 10 9 8 6

EAST
♡ 9 7 4
◇ K J 7 4
♣ J 8 4 2

SOUTH
♠ A Q 10 9 4
♡ J 10 3
◇ A 5 2
♣ A 6

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♣	Pass
3 ♠	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
4 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ♡.

After cashing his three top hearts, West shifted to the 10 of diamonds. This was covered by dummy's queen, East's king, and declarer's ace. South then led his four of trumps to dummy's king, after which he returned the seven of trumps to his ace. He now reflected on the situation at hand.

With both opponents having followed suit to his two trump leads, there was still one trump outstanding. If he picked up that trump, then the success of his contract would depend on being able to get rid of his two losing diamonds on dummy's clubs. This, in turn, would depend on either the six outstanding clubs being divided 3-3, or one one of the opponents having been dealt either the doubleton J-x of clubs, or the singleton jack.

It was unlikely that either opponent was dealt the singleton jack or the doubleton J-x of clubs. It was more likely that one of them had been dealt the J-x-x-x of culbs. If this latter set-up existed, then by drawing the last trump and cashing the ace, king, and queen of clubs, declarer would go down.

So our declarer deferred the picking up of the last trump (West's). At trick seven he cashed the ace of clubs, after which he led a club to the board's king. Next came a low club, South ruffing with his queen of trumps.

The 10 of trumps was then led to dummy's jack, West's trump being picked up en route. The club queen was cashed next, South discarding a diamond as East's jack fell. On the high 10 of clubs he tossed away his remaining losing diamond. He then claimed his contract, which, as is eyident, would have been defeated if declarer had gathered in all of the defenders' trumps immediately.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

We have 1,144 for the game today. Two 4s and two 1s. Using all four each time, but no other digits at all, you form expressions for consecutive numbers from one up.

Any arithmetical signs may be used, but no summation of factorial symbols. Don't forget both types of decimals, powers and roots (no extra digits). For exmaple, 19 plus 7 minus 1 is a solution for 25.

93 may be tough. The limit without a break in continuity seems to be 106. I shall be glad to check solutions, and will send free hints to help in future games if requested.

Yesterday's answer: BEETS was 10023 (odd).

9 IN MEMORIAM

KOLYN — In loving memory of Mrs. Anna Kolyn.
Grandmothers are made, of nephews and nieces,
Of love, and care, and close filling pieces,
They're made of old age, grey hair and wrinkles,
Voices of wisdom with soft falling sprinkles,
They're made of faith and quiet understanding,
They're never disgusting and never demanding,
They're made of tears from the griefs they know.
They're made of long years, that don't really show.
Yet people live on and still more will die,
And even grandmothers, must say goodbye,
To my grandmother up, in heaven above,
I miss you. I'll always remember your love.
—The family and Robert.

OBERG — In loving memory of dear Dad and Grandad Carl W. L., who passed away September 10, 1971
We do not forget you, nor do we intend,
We think of your often and will to the end;
Gone and forgotten by some you may be,
But dear to our memory you ever will be.
—Always remembered by the Family and Friends.

YOUR HEALTH: Dr. Walter Alvarez

Congestive Heart Failure

Heart failure does not always mean that the heartbeat stops. Often it means that though the heart goes on working, it does so with less than normal strength. Then if the person walks fast or does some strenuous work, he gets short of breath, or he gets what is called ANGINA PECTORIS (angina meaning pain, and pectoris meaning breast).

In some cases of mild heart trouble, a man who had been able to walk rapidly along the street, passing almost everyone on the sidewalk, now has to let many people pass him. Often in such cases the physician will speak of cardiac insufficiency, or rarely, cardiac asthma or pulmonary edema (swelling of the lungs with fluid that the weakened heart does not quickly pump out). Perhaps then the ankles will become swollen so that when the doctor presses on the swollen skin, he makes a little pit.

The term "heart failure" is likely to be used when the heart gets so weak that the person feels like staying in bed awhile. Sometimes the term used is "congestive heart failure." Doctors speak of congestive heart failure when, because of poor pumping, blood accumulates in the lungs.

When this happens, the heart specialist will try to strengthen the heart muscle so that it can do its work well again. The patient may have to rest awhile. If he has a high blood pressure, that will have to be lowered so as to take excessive strain off the heart, and perhaps the heart beat will have to be slowed. Also, the kidneys may have to be helped with medicine and diet.

Fortunately, the heart has great reserves of strength. Otherwise, it could not tolerate great strains such as it has when an athlete runs perhaps 25 miles. Sometimes, the heart becomes weakened by rheumatic fever, which may damage a heart valve, or a serious injury may be caused by the plugging up of an artery that supplies a part of the heart with blood. Fortunately rheumatic fever is not common today. It can be controlled with penicillin.

When the heart does not work well, blood backs up into the tissues of the body and, as I said, blood stagnating in the lungs can cause shortness of breath. Then the patient in bed may have to rest in a sitting position, propped up with two or more pillows. Sometimes excitement or nervousness can make some shortness of breaht — called dyspnea.

Most cases of mild heart trouble can be much helped by rest and medicine. If a heart valve is badly damaged, surgical repair may work a cure. If the person is overweight, a reduction diet can help much. In many cases, the stopping of smoking cigarettes lengthens life.

The commonest heart-helping drug is digitalis. It may help to use only a little table salt and only a little animal fat.

MONTREAL TO IGNORE OLYMPIC DE-EMPHASIS

MONTREAL (CP) — Mayor Jean Drapeau says he has no intention of scaling down the 1976 Montreal Olympics and predicted they will be as impressive as the Munich games but at a much lower cost.

Drapeau said a number of installations already built in Montreal will cut the cost of the 1976 summer games.

The mayor said Montreal's "privileged circumstances" will give the 1976 spectacle "a less gigantic dimension, but that doesn't necessarily mean it will be any smaller."

Last week Lord Killanin, the newly-elected president of the International Olympic Committee, urged that future Olympics be less costly, smaller, and lacking nationalistic "steam" in order to make them a less attractive target for terrorist attack.

Mirage Loses To Dynamite

TORONTO (CP) — The American challenger Dynamite again exhibited superior boat speed in light air Tuesday, blowing Mirage off the Lake Ontario course to take a 2-0 lead in the Canada's Cup sailing series.

The Canadian defender, skippered by Gordon Fisher of Toronto, received the finishing gun 18-minutes, 10 seconds behind the fast-footing Detroit boat.

Fisher protested to the race committee for not setting a windward leg to the first mark.

The committee ruled the protest was improperly lodged and refused to hear it.

Mahovlich Held Back By Injury

TORONTO (CP) — Frank Mahovlich missed two flights Tuesday night that carried Team Canada to Europe.

"He had a bit of a knee injury and he has an allergy that's breaking out," said Harry Sinden, general manager-coach of the Canadians who departed for Stockholm and Moscow. "He hurt the leg in the last game, but it had been bothering him before that.

"I don't think it will keep him out of any games against Russia."

The first flight was destined for Paris and Stockholm. The second, which left a half-hour later, was scheduled to stop at Frankfurt for Stockholm connections.

Team Canada will train in Stockholm and meet a Swedish select team in exhibition games there Sept. 16-17 before moving on to Moscow and the second half of an eight-game series on Sept. 22, 24, 26 and 28.

Trio Enters Guilty Plea In Race Fix

WILKES-BARRE, Pa. (AP) — Three harness racing figures have pleaded guilty to charges in connection with alleged fixing attempts at Pocono Downs near here in 1971.

Judge Bernard C. Brominski set Oct. 16 as the sentencing date Monday for Kenneth Backer of Ottawa, a driver; Anthony Bonura of Neptune, N.J., an owner; and Bert L. Enslen of Harrington, Del., an owner-driver-trainer.

Backer and Bonura pleaded guilty to charges of conspiracy and bribery in connection with two races in July, 1971. Enslen pleaded guilty to one count of conspiracy in connection with a fixing incident in June, 1971.

The charges stemmed from testimony by Pocono Downs drivers in hearings last year that they had been offered bribes to fix races.

Two School Players Die

(Times News Services)

Two school football players died and five slightly injured in two separate incidents Monday.

A 14-year-old junior high school player was electrocuted and five others slightly hurt when the metal practice goal posts against which they were leaning swayed into a power line at West Columbia, S.C.

At Toyah, Tex., Arthur Lara, who would have been 16 today, collapsed during practice at Toyah high school and died a short time later in a Pecos hospital. School officials said Lara might have been injured when tackled.

Kiniski Places Title On Line

Steven Little Bear will be out to regain the Pacific Coast title and exact a measure of revenge while tackling Gene Kiniski in the feature bout of a professional wrestling card Saturday at Memorial Arena.

Little Bear was sidelined for four weeks with a neck injury following the battle in which he lost the championship to Kiniski.

Among the other bouts, beginning at 8 p.m., Bulldog Brown and John Quinn tackle Eddie Morrow and Buck Ramstead in a tag-team tussle.

Edwards Rejoins Pittsburgh Club

BRANTFORD, Ont. (CP) — Pittsburgh Penguins got a surprise bonus Tuesday when they opened their National Hockey League training camp.

Veteran goaltender Roy Edwards, 35, who quit in midseason last year saying he'd had enough, showed up and passed his physical. He was given today off to return home and clear up some moving problems.

The only two regulars missing from the 1971-72 team were winger Val Fonteyne and goalie Les Binkley, both of whom jumped to the World Hockey Association.

Giants Give Fox A New Contract

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Charlie Fox, who managed San Francisco Giants to the National League Western Division title in 1971, has received a new contract for 1973.

Fox, who became the Giants' manager in May 1970, is completing his 31st season with the Giants organization. He was 1971 National League's "Manager-of-the-year" but the Giants are struggling in fifth place this season.

Terms of the contract were not announced.

Quaalade Joins Drugs On Street Sellers' List

FORMER BEATLE Ringo Starr and his wife Maureen stroll through London's Heathrow Airport on their way to New York, where they will be promoting a new movie.

WASHINGTON (WP) — In some circles, Quaalude, a trade name for the depressant Methaqualone, is being passed around instead of marijuana.

A prescription drug, it is becoming increasingly fashionable in major cities.

"We're looking at it now with a view to putting it under control," said Robert J. Rosthal, deputy chief counsel of the Bureau of Narcotics and Dangerous Drugs (BNDD). "Its use is becoming very widespread.

"I first heard of it last March at an American Bar Association meeting on dangerous drugs. People were saying, 'Hey, we've got a new one for you.' "

Physicians prescribe the drug as a sleeping aid in 150 and 300 mg. pills or in 75 mg. doses as a tranquilizer.

VARIED DIVERSIONS

"Undoubtedly there are diversions at all levels," says Rosthal, "manufacturing, wholesale and retail."

In addition to Quaalude, Methaqualone is marketed as Parest by Parke-Davis, Optimil by Wallace Pharmaceuticals and Sopor by Arnar-Stone.

Rosthal expects that they will be placed under the same controls applied to amphetamines under the Drug Abuse Act of 1970. This would mean manufacture and distribution would be restricted and recorded.

"The law requires a painstaking survey so it will be a little while before controls go into effect," Rosthal reported.

Market Mission

REGINA (CP) A farmers' marketing mission will visit Southeast Asia in October to examine market conditions and promote goodwill between prairie farmers and the overseas customers.

Alan Coulter, a director of the Palliser Wheat Growers Association, said Tuesday the mission will be known as the Canadian Grain Producer Mission. It will visit Japan, South Korea, Hong Kong, the Phillipines, Malaysia and Singapore.

Some heavy users of the drug say it makes them relaxed and calm while still enabling them to be agile and mobile. Others who have overused it report muscular tension and agitation.

Quaalude, one of the most sought after of the Methaqualone products, was introduced in 1966 by William H. Rorer, Inc.

BLACK MARKET

C. M. McCallister, the company's executive vice-president, says, "We're in business to produce quality drugs for those who need them. There are millions of people in this country with sleeping problems. But we're damn concerned about any misuse. If 100 tablets get diverted into misuse, that's 100 too many."

One hundred 300 mg. Quaaludes sell for $5.50 wholesale and about $11 on the legitimate retail market. In the New York area, 100 of the 300 mg. pills can be had on the black market for about $50.

Rosthal said he had received reports of Methaqualone abuse from both prosecuting and defence attorneys as well as individual citizens.

Tracker Proves Itself On Land

By DAN SLOVITT

SHEARWATER, N.S. (CP) — It was a typical morning at VS-880 squadron headquarters at the Canadian Forces Base here.

Two flight crews were putting together their gear for a search and rescue mission to Schefferville, Que., to look for a missing helicopter. Another prepared for a coastal patrol mission.

None of the preparations was out of the ordinary. The missions were a small part of the role played by the squadron and its 30 Tracker aircraft.

Eighteen of the Tracker aircraft, a two-engine propeller-driven midget by air force standards, once adorned the flight deck of the aircraft carrier Bonaventure. They supplied support for the carrier and were the mainstay of her anti-submarine capabilities.

When the carrier was taken out of duty in late 1969, the squadron was moved to Shearwater, near Dartmouth.

KEPT IN SERVICE

Now, with defence department emphasis placed on sovereignty of Canadian waters, the Trackers are the key watchdogs.

Capt. Jacques Cote, base commander, said the Tracker has proved so useful in fulifling the requirements of the department, the government rescinded its decision to retire it.

The aircraft here and three placed in a West Coast squadron were scheduled for removal from service this year, but were given new life when Ottawa made coastal patrol a priority.

The four-man crews on the Tracker are kept busy.

The crew scheduled for coastal patrol started their day with the pre-flight briefing, including weather information, definition of their task, their flight surveillance area and an intelligence report.

On a five-hour flight they were to scan a wide area off the Nova Scotia coast, out to Sable Island and down to the southwestern tip of the province.

SOVIET SHIPS

Their mission: surveillance of Canadian waters, a check of movements of foreign vessels off the coast, watch for pollution violators and violators of fisheries regulations and detection of any sub-surface movement.

The intelligence officer spoke of a heavy concentration of foreign fishing craft between the provincial coast and crescent-shaped Sable Island, about 160 miles from Halifax.

Although weather conditions made surface surveillance near Sable Island impossible the crew was not disappointed. In a radius of about 20 miles, midway between the coast and Sable Island, radar detected several vessels.

From an altitude of 1,000 feet, 18 Soviet fishing vessels — stern trawlers, factory ships and a tanker — were sighted.

The crew took pictures of the Soviet vessels for intelligence purposes and their positions were reported. Then they returned for the post-flight report on their findings.

Company One Opens Season at Open Space

SEASON-ENDING ROMP is enjoyed by two Vancouver teenagers. Beach, littered with sun-bathers for past two months, now is an empty runway as summer visitors pull out en masse.

By LINDA HUGHES
Times Staff

Company One, Victoria's improvisational theatre company which thrilled audiences across Canada in its recent national tour, will open a second season Sept. 30 with a series of weekend performances at Open Space.

Under the direction of Carl Hare, the 14 company members form a non-profit, charitable society to present workshops and events to groups in the community.

It represents the work of a company searching for ways in which it can make the most intimate contact with its audiences, using materials with which that audience can relate most deeply.

Playing to school and church groups, and often to young children, the company varies its style and subject matter in an attempt to find the means to express the ideas and concerns of their audience.

Small theatre companies are becoming popular in Canada, but Company One's improvisational community approach give them a uniqueness and fresh approach which won them praise across the country on their three-month tour last spring.

The company was formed in May, 1971, with an Opportunities for Youth grant, and has since been financed by a $30,000 local initiatives grant which expires at the end of September. Additional grants have been applied for.

St. George's Parish Church is the group's rehearsal hall and members have been training 12 hours a day in preparation for the new season.

Most of their repertoire developed from suggestions by local groups and individuals.

"Mary," for example, one of their most successful theatrical productions, grew out of a suggestion by a group of Catholic sisters. It explores the emotions of Mary Magdalene at the tomb of Jesus between the time of the crucifixion and Easter morning.

After each performance the cast talks informally with the audience and from their comments and questions the play may change or evolve further. "Mary" has been revised seven times.

Simplicity and freedom seem to be the key to the company's success. As critic Christopher Dafoe described them:

"Company One work beautifully together, creating small flowers of delight out of words, gestures and simple emotions."

The weekend performances at Open Space will include Nightplay, a theatre event which relates most closely to the audience. Improvisations and theatre games are played as the actors create scenes based on situations and themes supplied by the audience.

Tale Theatre will be the other major event in the Open Space program, as the company enters into the ancient tradition of story-telling. Tales are related in the third person as the company acts them out in the first.

Three of the tales are based on West Coast Salish Indian legends and were suggested by the Victoria Public Library in conjunction with Young Canada Book Week.

Besides the open Space series, the company will be giving school and church performances throughout the year, will tour to Vancouver and up-Island, are planning a full-scale production on the beginnings of Canada and the building of the CPR, and will be off on another Canadian tour next spring.

Tickets for the Open Space performances are $2 and are available from Open Space or Company One, 2580 Maynard St. (477-9544). The programs will be every weekend from Sept. 30 to Oct. 28.

Cut Jobless Or Step Aside, CLC Tells Govt.

EDMONTON (CP) — Donald MacDonald, president of the 1.7-million-member Canadian Labor Congress, says the government should put an end to unemployment "or step aside for those who will do the job."

MacDonald was here to address the Canadian conference of the International Union of Operating Engineers today, and summed up what he termed the staggering problems facing the country.:

"Technological change and the increasingly impersonal computerized society it represents, attacks on personal freedoms by an ever-growing government bureaucracy, and intolerably high unemployment coupled with continuing inflation that an idea-bankrupt government is not able to cope with."

MacDonald said that instead of taking effective steps to curb unemployment, the government finds "novel ways to calculate and interpret our unemployment rates."

"Juggling and misinterpreting statistics in the vain hope that the problem will be hidden in a smokescreen of data and meaningless jargon would seem the only official answer to a very real human problem."

Spaceship Earth Isn't Ecologist

BANFF, Alta. (CP) — Too many people believe technology will enable man to live in an entirely artificial environment, Dr. Donald J. Kuenen of the Netherlands said Tuesday.

"They do not realize that tht fact that three astronauts can live for a few weeks in a space capsule does not mean that 3½ billion people can do the same on earth."

Dr. Kuenen, general director of the Research Institute for Nature Management in the Netherlands, made the remarks in a paper presented to a technical session of the triennial convention of the International Union for the Conservation of Nature and Natural Resources.

"For quite a long time . . . we will need plants for food production," said Kuenen, also chairman of the union's commission on ecology.

All kinds of plants and animals must be reserved for the purposes of biological control, domestication experiments, gene pools, pharmaceutical products and the scientific study of the living world, he said.

'Further technological developments are necessary in many areas, but we must not make the same mistakes that have been made elsewhere, or destroy the potentialities of the environment.

"Technologically - advanced countries must reorganize their land use so as to restore divtrsity wherever possible . . . diversity must be safeguarded to leave the options open for meaningful future decisions."

Delegates, representing more than 80 countries, also were told that it would be immoral to stop developing countries from building basic industries just because they may cause some pollution.

James A. Lee of the International Bank of Reconstruction and Development in Washington, D. C., said the only cure for poverty is development which cannot, and should not, be stopped.

Evidence Refused

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Defence lawyer William Kunstler has been turned down on a motion to introduce into evidence the personnel records of two policemen involved in a fatal struggle last March with five Onondaga Indians.

One of the Indians, Leroy Shenandoah, 34, was killed and the other four whom Kunstler is representing were charged with assault.

TIMES NEWS SERVICES

OTTAWA — The National Research Council of Canada and the Academy of Sciences of the U.S.S.R. have signed a new two-year agreement on scientific co-operation.

The agreement, signed by NRC President Dr. W. G. Schneider and Academy of Sciences of the U.S.S.R President Dr. M. V. Keldysh in Moscow Tuesday, covers the exchange of visiting scientists from the two countries and the planning of jointly-sponsored scientific meetings and scientific research by the two countries.

It falls within the framework of the General Exchange Agreement signed by Canada and Russia on Oct. 20, 1971. Under the agreement, countries will conduct annual exchanges of scientists on a reciprocal basis.

In one type of exchange, three eminent scientists from each country will visit for periods of up to one month to present lectures, conduct seminars and familiarize themselves with research on various problems of science.

Visits of scientists for periods of not less than three months, to do research, also are covered.

PROJECT AIMS TO SAVE FALCON

MONTREAL (CP) — A campaign to protect the peregrine falcon from poisonous chemicals and save the breed from extinction has begun at McGill University's Macdonald College.

The $25,000-a-year project is aimed at obtaining young birds in the wild, raising them in an aviary and eventually restoring falcon populations to wild areas.

The quantities of poisonous chemicals in the wild should decline to tolerable levels over a period of time, Prof. Robert Lemon, co-ordinator of the Macdonald Raptor Reproductive Research Centre, said in an interview Tuesday.

Raptors are birds of prey and several species, including falcons, eagles, and buzzards, once common throughout North America, are threatened with extinction. 7

The first year's operation of the five-year peregrine falcon program has been financed by private donations, Prof. Lemon said. Further financial support is expected from private and government sources.

The last pair of falcons seen in the Montreal area nested on the ledges of the downtown Sun Life Building from 1936 to 1952. Falcons have a life span of about 20 years.

MIXED VIEWS ON OFY

By JEAN SHARP

TORONTO (CP) — After a year with the Opportunities for Youth Program, Leah Cohen says she has mixed feelings.

She said she believes it has had many successes among the young people whose projects it financed, but that it is a failure internally, as an organization.

Miss Cohen is 27. She went to Opportunities for Youth with a zeal to help the times change for the better. She has a year of law and a master's degree in political science.

She worked for the Manitoba government, doing studies on post-secondary education, on the job market and new careers.

"I got frustrated with ideas. I wanted to be doing things, and Opportunities for Youth has provided satisfaction. It is unique."

She said much of her frustration with it arises from its administrative problems.

The $34-million program is set up under the department of the secretary of state to provide funds for projects originated and run by young people.

Miss Cohen said the Toronto staff had to spend days on work such as getting phones installed and chasing late cheques.

"I think the concept is superb, but administratively it's chaos. I've worked for governments before, and I don't understand the problems. I assume it's a low priority. People were irate, and that helped generate bad publicity."

There were about two months in which to attract and choose project submissions. Miss Cohen had 300 from which to select 37.

"There should be more money . . . The selection period was hysterical, but I think 95 per cent of what we did fund were good projects."

Eventually she worked with about 40 projects involving about 600 people in a specific area of the city. What she did varied with the projects.

"My favorite ones are where the kids worked with old people. We had one Chinese one, and the old people now want to get a New Horizons grant for retired people and go on themselves."

She stepped in when someone tried to claim credit for the work of an Opportunities for Youth research group. She helped straighten out a disagreement between police and another group.

"Individuals don't understand their rights. We often acted as liaison between officials and community groups and desensitized situations, cooled things off."

Britain, France Rapped by U.S.

Times News Services

High-ranking U.S. state department officials today called the British and French votes during United Nations Security Council debate on the Mideast crisis Sunday "an outrage."

The United States vetoed a Security Council resolution, critical of Israeli raids on Lebanon and Syria, because the resolution did not include condemnation of the Arab terrorist acts which provoked the retaliatory attacks.

"It is unconscionable for the Western European allies to support the resolution," a top-level U.S. official said.

The belated denunciation of Britain and France — the veto was used Sunday night — is acknowledged by Nixon officials as part of a diplomatic arm-twisting aimed at toughening international efforts against air-piracy and other terrorist acts.

Meanwhile, Lebanon's premier expressed fear Tuesday of a new Israeli attack as United Nations Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim called for General Assembly action against terrorism.

"From an evaluation of the situation we cannot say that last week's Israeli attack would be the last," Premier Saeb Salam told the Lebanese parliament.

His fears apparently were based on reports of continuing Israeli troop concentrations along Lebanon's southern borders and of new Israeli threats to strike at the Arab terrorists.

Salam said the Lebanese army has clear orders "to do the utmost to repel any Israeli aggression, at any price."

"We do not claim to have the power to deter Israel completely," he added, "but it is inconceivable not to repel an aggression."

Israeli planes attacked Palestinian positions in Lebanon and Syria last Friday in retaliation for the Olympics massacre in Munich Tuesday in which 11 Israelis, five Arab terrorists and a West German policeman were killed.

Premier Golda Meir told the Israeli parliament Tuesday that Israel will strike against Arab terrorists with all its strength and skill. With only the Communists abstaining, the legislators supported

Life Ignored In Attica Attack

NEW YORK (WP) — New York State's official investigation of the revolt at Attica prison has concluded that the state almost callously disregarded human life in its handling of the uprising.

The investigating commission, appointed at the request of Gov. Nelson Rockefeller two weeks after he had approved using state troopers' firepower to reclaim the prison — one year ago today — criticized Rockefeller's role in the events.

The report's most chilling section is on the police action in reclaiming the prison from the rebellious inmates.

In 15 minutes of wild shooting, 39 persons were killed by the troopers, 10 of them state employees who had been held hostage by the inmates.

MASS CHAOS

The report describes mass chaos in the attack, including no communications between squad leaders and commanders, no way to tell men to stop firing and no clear directions on when to fire.

In the prison yard, says the commission's report, "troopers shot into tents, trenches, and barricades without looking first. In addition, even where the firing may have been justified . . . the use of shotguns loaded with buckshot in the heavily populated spaces of D yard led to the killing and wounding of hostages and of inmates who were not engaged in any hostile activity."

The nine-member investigation commission, which was headed by Dean Robert B. McKay of New York University Law School, said that "the major significance of this report may lie in the fact that it documents in considerable detail every aspect of the life and structure of a major prison, based upon more precise information than has ever before been assembled about any single institution . . ."

The commission interviewed about 1,600 inmates, 400 prison guards, 270 state troopers, 200 national guardsmen and hundreds of others involved.

It found that the inmates' grievances were legitimate, in

THIS PERFORMANCE WORTH $300,000

MENTOR, Ohio (UPI) — Two men who gave faultless performances as Brinks' guards walked off with more than $300,000 Tuesday from a branch here of the Lake County National Bank.

The ruse became evident only when the real guards arrived an hour after the imposters had departed in what police said was an armored car.

They passed through a check-in procedure at which time their credentials and signatures were checked. Both appeared authentic, bank president Albert R. Pike said.

"The procedure was pretty much foolproof, we thought," Pike said.

Ten minutes later the two men pushed a cart loaded with six money bags containing more than $300,000 in currency from the bank to the parking lot and departed.

Branch manager David Gibb was in the bank along with 20 employees and about 15 customers at the time, but nothing the men did raised their suspicions.

"They conducted themselves like Brinks' guards would," Pike said.

Because they entered the bank by a rear windowless door, regularly used by Brinks, no one inside saw their getaway vehicle. But the FBI at Cleveland issued an alert for "an armored car, which may have been fraudulent or stolen."

The money was to have been moved to the Federal Reserve Bank at Cleveland. Pike said the amount, which was insured, was not unusually high for the bank.

Stanfield on Jobless While PM Talks Unity

Times News Services

A pitch for federalism and national unity and continued high employment were the springboards for the official launching of the Liberal and Progressive Conservative campaigns for the Oct. 30 federal election.

Uncontested in their nominations, Prime Minister Trudeau in the Montreal riding of Mount Royal firmly rejected any thought of Quebec separation and made a strong pitch for federalism and national unity.

In Halifax, PC leader Robert Stanfield said in his nominating meeting that continued high unemployment was one of the basic reasons why the Trudeau government should be thrown out of office.

Meanwhile in Edmonton, New Democrat Leader David Lewis repeated his earlier contention that the system of grants and tax concessions to coporations is not working.

Other business of Trudeau's first day on the campaign trail included a reception, again packed solid with well-wishers, and meetings with federal cabinet ministers in the Montreal area.

He was joined for the reception and the nomination meeting by Mrs. Trudeau. She looked uncomfortable in the crush of the reception and had to leave the stage while he was speaking at night because of the heat. She returned later.

Stanfield stressed in his nomination speech that within weeks of taking over the reins of government he would call a federal-provincial conference so that Ottawa and the provinces could "mutually" determine Canada's goals in directions for the future.

The opposition leader told a standing-room-only meeting of more than 1,200 persons that

Red Ships Barred From NATO Test

OSLO (Reuter) — Two Soviet ocean research vessels have been barred from entering a Norwegian harbor because of the imminent NATO exercise Strong Express in the North Atlantic, informed sources said.

The Soviet vessels, Fridtjof Nansen and Poisk, have been participating in a joint Soviet-Norwegian research program off the coast of Siberia.

They were to have anchored at Tromsoe, northern Norway from Sept. 11 to 15 to discuss research results with their Norwegian colleagues.

But the sources said Tuesday night the vessels have been refused entry by Norway's foreign ministry.

The NATO exercise will include 300 ships and 700 aircraft taking part in combined land, sea and air operations in northern Norway.

The Canadian contingent taking part will consist of about 1,000 troops from the 3rd Battalion Royal Canadian Regiment in Petawawa, Ont., 3rd Battalion Royal Canadian Horse Artillery, Shilo, Man., and a detachment from 427 Tactical Helicopter Squadron, also in Petawawa.

Barrett Waits . . . And Waits

The Bennett government held its last cabinet meeting Tuesday afternoon and the premier is expected to resign soon.

Bennett refused to say when he will take the last trip to Government House, saying only that it will occur "before the end of the week."

He added that "I think, I'm sure" the changeover will take place before the end of the week.

Asked this morning if he will resign today, Bennett said: "Not this morning."

Pressed if the changeover might come later in the day, he said: "I wouldn't think so."

The first NDP caucus since the election is at 10 a.m. Saturday.

Barrett, who has often expressed disagreement with some of the traditions connected with Government House, is expected to have at least his cabinet ministers sworn in to office at the Legislative Buildings on Saturday.

Members of the Legislative Press Gallery were asked to prepare to show credentials before covering the events on the weekend.

Meanwhile, administrative wheels in the Bennett government continued to turn. A total of $594,832 in special warrants and other grants were dispensed and announced Tuesday in cabinet orders.

A $400,000 amount, issued by special warrant, goes to the UBC Asian Studies centre as a matching Ottawa grant for a library.

Two homes for the mentally retarded in the Vancouver area will receive a total of $88,832, also by special warrant, which means there was no legislative authority for the grant.

Under the Elderly Citizens Housing Aid Act another $108,000 was granted.

The cabinet also approved school district and hospital district debentures totalling $20,500,000.

Study A-Power NDP Advised

By AL FORREST

Atomic Energy of Canada president Lorne Gray says Premier-elect Dave Barrett should study the nuclear power plants of Ontario and Quebec before deciding for or against nuclear power for British Columbia.

"I advise Mr. Barrett to talk to the users, not the salesmen," Gray said in an interview this morning.

He was in Victoria to address a Victoria Chamber of Commerce luncheon.

"He (Barrett) shouldn't take my word for it, naturally I am biased in favor of nuclear power, nor should he listen to Mr. Keenleyside."

On Tuesday, Dr. Hugh Keenleyside, issued a dissenting stand against the nuclear power plant urged for Vancouver Island by the majority of the B.C. Energy Board.

Gray said that Barrett, or his resources minister, should spend some months studying nuclear power installations at Pickering, Ontario, and other eastern plants.

Gray said he was confident the study would convince the incoming New Democratic government it should begin discussions by the end of 1973 toward construction of a nuclear power plant for Vancouver Island to open about 1981.

He said it need not necessarily be constructed at either Duncan, favored by energy board chairman Gordon Shrum, nor at Nanaimo, urged by the Nanaimo Chamber of Commerce.

"It might be worthwhile to look at sites on the west coast of the island. It would be no problem to construct transmission lines from the west coast."

Gray earlier conducted a study of possible sites for a nuclear power plant near Nanaimo and urged construction of a plant there if the citizens and government want it.

He said the desires of the local citizens should be the main consideration in selecting a site.

Gray praised the energy

Screams Disrupt Fire Death Probe

MONTREAL (CP) — The opening of an inquest into the fire that killed 37 persons and injured 53 others at the downtown Blue Bird Cafe Sept. 1 was disrupted minutes after it began today.

Giles Eccles, 24, being held in connection with the blaze, had just been escorted into the courtroom flanked by two police guards when a man and his wife ran towards the witness box yelling "I'll kill you, you bastard."

The man's wife screamed "no, no" and tried to restrain her husband. He was quickly overpowered by police and removed from the courtroom.

Other spectators remained quiet during the incident.

Flowers Greet Northern Reds in Seoul

By DON OBERDORFER
The Washington Post

SEOUL — With flowers, music and beautiful girls, with a million people watching, waving and applauding along the roadside, and with a lantern-lit reception in a ceremonial hall of the ancient kings, South Korea Tuesday welcomed the first North Koreans to openly enter this city since the armed invasion of 1950.

The welcome was part diplomacy, part one-upmanship and part sincere emotion. But whatever the motives and the methods, this latest chapter in the modern Korean story has given rise to considerable optimism. Both sides expressed the hope that it will lead to further steps on the long road back from enmity, division and war.

In a richly-decorated hotel ballroom this morning, officials of the Communist North and the anti-Communist South sat down to further talks about reunion of divided families and eventual reunification of this bitterly-divided country.

Little certifiable progress and few if any hard agreements are expected in this week's public encounter, the second round in Korean Red Cross-sponsored talks which opened late last month in Pyongyang, the capital of the North.

In this case, however, the tone is almost as important as the substance. And so far, the tone is surprisingly cordial in the light of all that has gone before.

Just before 10 a.m. Tuesday, the 54-member North Korean delegation crossed the now-misnamed "Bridge of No Return" at Panmunjom and headed south through the demilitarized zone for their five-day visit across the line, led by Kim Tae Huk, a short, portly, broadly-grinning diplomat.

The visitors were greeted by the southern counterparts they had met two weeks ago in Pyongyang. There was much handshaking, some laughing and something of the air of a slightly stiff family reunion. Lee Bum Suk, a tall South Korean diplomat turned Red Cross executive, played host.

After preliminary remarks in a hopeful vein and the presentation of clusters of pink flowers by pigtailed schoolgirls, the two delegations left in Cadillacs, Toyotas and air-conditioned buses on the 28-mile journey on the newly refurbished "Unification Highway" to Seoul.

Only 10 American military men were on duty at the DMZ, many fewer than usual, and they were under strict instructions to stay out of sight. American military slogans blazoned on former U.S. camps near the front had been taken down or painted over. Although 43,000 U.S. troops remain in South Korea, the northern visitors saw hardly any of them.

The people of tiny villages and small towns near the highway gathered at the roadside. At the outskirts of Seoul, beyond anti-tank barriers erected against northern invaders, the crowds became larger. In the city itself throngs of men, women and children lined the streets.

Some of the onlookers, born in the North, expressed the fervent hope they would soon be able to contact long-lost family members. Others said they had come because this was an important day in the life of the nation.

As the visitors' motorcade rolled through the centre of the city, there was spontaneous applause from many people and friendly waves from most of the rest.

Local leaders had passed the word to the public to be friendly but not enthusiastic. It was widely noted that the citizenry of the North paid only minimal attention to the southern visitors to Pyongyang, and the South Koreans had determined to show a friendlier face.

Death of a Hunter —Once Was Enough

One of the kindest and gentlest men I know phoned me Saturday, opening day of the season for antlered deer, and asked me if I'd like to go on my second hunting trip and I lied.

It wasn't the state of my health, as I said. The truth is that once was enough. Sure, I accept his word that the serious hunter is not a monster lusting for blood, that the sport calls for skill and patience and stamina. But, for me, once was enough.

I think back to that moment of decision as a tableaux in which each detail seems not merely remembered, but precisely etched on the mind. I remember stepping over a windfall swathed in moss with the texture of velvet, the color of young apples. I was breathing heavily from the climb up through the cedars. I leaned the rifle against the fallen tree with the barrel pointing straight up, hoping this was the approved way as Mac had instructed me. I took off the brand new bright red hunting cap, already stained with sweat, and put it over the muzzle of the rifle. I reached in the breast pocket of my windbreaker for the cigarettes.

At that instant the buck appeared. It stepped daintily into a clearing no more than 50 feet away, moving fastidiously through the sword fern and the waxy growth of salal. It stood there, head erect, caught in a shaft of sunlight that sliced through the cedar boughs.

I picked up the .300 Savage and put it to my shoulder, closed my left eye and looked down the open, buckhorn sights. The rifle shook slightly from nervousness, but the sights were dead on the buck's neck. ("Get 'em in the neck just in front of the shoulder," Mac had said. "That breaks their neck and they go down.") My finger tensed on the trigger. I hadn't had a rifle in my hands since my Army days, but I'd no doubt that I was on the mark.

The buck turned its proud head and looked directly at me.

In the space of perhaps 10 seconds I found myself examining the morality, the ethics and the pattern of the hunt. As I say, it was my first experience at this sort of thing. Until that climactic confrontation it had been one of the most pleasant mornings I could recall.

We'd been three, going on four hours in the woods, working the gentler lower slopes of the mountain without success and Mac had been growing more irritable. "They oughtn't to be so spooky this early in the season," he grumbled. Then, when I'd lagged behind, wondering if I was ever going to get my second wind, he'd elected to go on alone.

"I'll try the upper ridge," he said. "You mosey around down here." He was trying hard not to show his regret that he'd taken along a beginner.

So he'd gone climbing up through the stand of cedar and suddenly I felt a pure sense of elation. It was my first time in the forest in years. It was like stepping back into my youth to breathe in the clean and resinous fragrance of the woods. The morning had been cold and clammy with dew. Now the climbing sun warmed the forest floor. Birds flew and talked and thrummed in the branches above.

Once I bent to a giant fungus growing low on a stump and etched my initials with a stick on the fan of its chalky face, knowing the initials would turn sepia and would be there for many years.

I'd abandoned the stealthy walk I'd affected, somewhat self-consciously, imitating Mac. I sauntered easily along an old trail, skirted a small lake thick with lily pads, and then climbed up through the heavy cedars where I'd stopped to rest.

Now the buck was gazing steadily at me, its enormous eyes calf-like yet intelligent, timid, innocently curious. I was disturbed by its smallness. Its two straight horns identified it as a spike buck ("Not much of a trophy," Mac had said, "but mighty good eating.") It seemed frail against the backdrop of the cedars.

I found myself thinking what would happen with a single squeeze of the trigger finger. The explosion of the shell. The birds rising in alarm. The bright claret on the tawny neck. The buck's coiled-spring alertness collapsed into an inert thing. The long ride away from this green and hushed clearing on the mountainside.

I lowered the rifle slowly from my shoulder, the buck lifting its head higher, its eyes widening. I clapped my hands and sang out in a loud voice, "On your way, pal."

The buck wheeled as if it had been struck and went off through the salal, graceful yet oddly comical, too, with its stiff-legged bounds and the white tail like an erratic flag.

I lit the cigarette I'd stopped for and finished it slowly, reluctant to leave. Then I stood up and picked up the rifle, noticing that the safety catch was still on, and that was the last time I ever went hunting.

A 5,390-acre network of fields, forest, parks and institutional lands laced with lakes and waterways is visualized in a Saanich proposal for greenbelt protection.

If followed to its conclusion, the Saanich proposal would encompass about 21 per cent of the municipality's total area, with new acquisition accounting for 1,865 acres at a cost currently estimated at $6.2 million.

Mayor Hugh Curtis, who called the plan the most comprehensive document of its kind, presented it to the Social Credit government in April for consideration under terms of the $25 million Greenbelt Protection Fund Act.

He deliberately kept the plan under wraps for fear of jeopardizing the municipality's chances of getting government acceptance and to prevent it from becoming a political issue in the recent election campaign.

The Bennet government accepted the plan cordially but committed no funds to land acquisition in Saanich before the Aug. 30 election which turned out Social Credit.

Curtis, in releasing the submission, said today Saanich will resubmit the proposal when it is determined who will be the responsible ministers in David Barrett's NDP cabinet.

"I would hope the quality and thought of the presentation and the soundness of the plan would combine to commend the plan to any government," Curtis said, referring to it as a "politically neutral document."

"In our view it is a true greenbelt proposal in that it relates to land not necessarily adjacent to highways," he said.

This was a reference to a narrow interpretation placed upon the Greenbelt Act by the former government, favoring "visible" greenspace bordering arterial routes.

According to the Saanich view, Greenbelt Protection Act funds "should be used to separate a rural or semi-rural area from an urban area," said Curtis.

Saanich's proposal outlines a roughly fiddle-shaped area of urban development bounded by Swan Lake, Blenkinsop Valley, Beaver-Elk Lakes and Colquitz River basin.

Narrow bands of green space connect each of the major open spaces and in turn other green areas radiate from the periphery in the form of outlying parks, waterways and recreation areas.

These are shown in the proposal as agricultural lands and forest in the west Saanich area north to Prospect Lake and the Central Saanich boundary, west to Francis Park and east to Mt. Douglas Park.

A smaller thrust of land would connect the lower Colquitz at Portage Inlet to the Marigold area south of Swan Creek junction where Saanich is engaged in land acquisition on its own for greenbelt and flood plain protection purposes.

Improved and developed waterways running through the major part of the ultimate green area would enable canoeists to travel from the north end of Elk Lake through the Colquitz system to Swan Lake and northward again into Blenkinsop Lake, which could be greatly enlarged.

Patricia Bay Highway would run almost through the exact centre of the oval, cutting the botoom of it at one of the narrowest points near Saanich municipal hall.

At the north end, or "handle" of the fiddle, the highway would be bounded on the west side by greenbelt and Beaver-Elk Lakes. The proposal makes no recommendation for lands east of the highway anywhere north of Royal Oak Burial Park.

"Only the infusion of substantial amounts of public monies to acquire full or part interest in land can fully accomplish the greenbelt protection goal," states the Saanich proposal, which was prepared by municipal planning and technical staff.

It says other North American experience shows zoning and other regulatory measures are ineffective over the longer term in protecting green space.

Flood plains, steep slopes, selected wooded areas, wetlands and prime agricultural lands need protection now to assure quality environment for living and make maximum use of resources, to provide adequate future recreation space and relieve unbroken urbanization to achieve socially desirable living space.

"Suburban Saanich is still in a position to establish a broad greenbelt capable of providing a permanent frame to the main urban area of the capital region," the proposal says.

"However, it cannot be overemphasized that the time for action is now before development pressures push raw land values beyond the realm of feasibility."

It is noted that much of the land resource is unsuitable for urban development in any case.

On its own initiative and through the Capital Regional District, Saanich since 1960 has spent just over $5 million on the purchase of land for parks, recreation and open space.

The further greenbelt acquisitions would provide a "linear open space system" for "breathing space" capable of a variety of uses compatible with the urban areas it is designed to "shape, serve and protect."

"The skelton of the greenbelt is made up by the lakes and streams, the varied topography that nature and the passage of time have bestowed on the land," states the proposal.

Of the proposed area to be acquired, 72 per cent is suitable for farming and the plan suggests provision for leaseback of farm properties. There are also a variety of ways suggested to acquire further lands for the greenbelt, including outright sale with lifetime occupancy rights of the owner.

"Initial approaches have been made to property owners so that it does not come as a great surprise that we are interested in their land for greenbelt," Curtis said.

He pointed out the plan must remain flexible, however, and is therefore subject to revision.

Open space should include wildlife sanctuaries, the preservation of historical or archeological sites and a trail network for hikers and cyclists, the proposal states.

It is noteworthy that under the proposal the existing 783 acres of lakes in Saanich, having 11 miles of shoreline, could be expanded to double the area and nearly triple the shoreline.

The submission was not prepared in isolation, Curtis said.

"It was put together with reference to regional district staff," and it includes a recommendation that land in View Royal, Colwood and Metchosin areas be considered for acquisition, keyed to the Saanich greenbelt.

"The environment of the Saanich Peninsula is unique in Canada," the report says, concerned that it remain so and not permit Victoria to become "just one more North American city."

"If this happens the economic consequences alone would be disastrous. It is our contention that only by the protection of substantial amounts of land within a greenbelt system can this character be preserved from complete change.

"It is therefore a wise investment which in our view must be made without delay," the submission asks.

Copies of the proposal, assembled with colored photographs, maps and tables at a cost of about $1,000, will be available for purchase through Saanich planning department.

Saanich Still Able To Offer Green Border Of Capital

Protesters Pack Meet

Supporters of the Campbell River school board's decision to fire high school principal John Young packed a meeting of the school board Tuesday night, expressing complaints about the school and the former principal.

School board chairman Hal Newman said today more than 50 persons attended the meeting, crowding the board room and spilling out into the hallway.

He said a total of 68 letters backing the board's decision were received from the public, most from parents of children who have attended or are still attending the high school.

Newman said six letters have been received supporting Young as principal and that only one person attending the Tuesday night meeting expressed verbal support for Young.

No action was taken by the board Tuesday night but Newman said the letters and briefs from the public were received.

4-3 VOTE

As chairman of the board, he had made an announcement to the meeting of the disposition of Young's case. The meeting was opened to the public and the anti-Young presentations were heard.

The Campbell River board voted 4-3 last Thursday night to terminate Young's employment. The board had earlier suspended him for "misconduct and neglect of duty" over a memo Young had sent to the board, objecting to a list of rules the board wanted him to enforce on students at the school.

Young is expected to appeal the decision to the minister of education and will likely get a hearing from a board of reference which will be established. Appeals to the courts are possible after a decision by that body.

In a related development, two persons charged with obstruction following a demonstration in support of Young at the school last week were remanded without plea for the second time today. Mary Hay, 40, and Robert Baskin, 17, will appear in court at a later date. Baskin is also charged with causing a disturbance.

ENERGY CRISIS LECTURES

A lecture series featuring world-renowned experts on water and energy resources will be offered this fall by the University of Victoria.

The course of 12 evening lectures, starting Sept. 20, will include as speakers the university's own Dr. Derrick Sewell and Dr. Earl Cook, dean of geosciences at Texas A and M university, who is an advisor to the president of the United States on energy problems.

Sewell is an economist and geographer and one of the world's leading authorities on energy and water resource management. He is a member of the technical advisory committee for negotiations of the Columbia River Treaty and an advisor to both NATO and the UN on water and energy resources.

Information on the lecture series can be obtained from Uvic's division of continuing education.

The series will explore the critical choices which must be made within the next 10 years concerning the quantity and the method of producing, transmitting and consuming our supply of exploitable energy resources.

Smoking Dump May Shut School

Threats came at a meeting of the Sooke school board Tuesday night when parents of seven children at Millstream Elementary said they would keep their children out of school until the smoke problem from the dump is solved.

School district superindentent E. E. Hyndman said today it is up to Dr. Smillie to decide whether smoke from the dump is a health problem and that Smillie has the authority to clsoe the school down if he feels it is necessary.

Smillie has already been at the school today and Hyndman said it is likely he will make a report to the school district shortly.

"I agree that if the smoke is a danger to the youngsters, they shouldn't be at the school," Hyndman said. "But at the same time, people shouldn't be panicking if there is no real danger."

Hyndman said he had seen no trace of smoke Tuesday afternoon at the school, but that the worst problem appears to be in the morning when low-lying cloud keeps the smoke close to the ground.

Smillie was unavailable for comment this morning.

Hospital Marks Name Change

An official ceremony will be held at Victoria General Hospital at 2:30 p.m., Sept. 26, to change hte name of the building from the old St. Joseph's Hospital.

At the same time, a plaque from the medical staff of the hospital paying tribute to the Sisters of St. Ann will be unveiled. The ceremony will be at the Collinson Street entrance.

HAIRY PROBLEMS OF VOTE COUNTERS

Long-haired "hippie-type" enumerators are creating headaches to one Vancouver returning officer, but the problem is non-existent in Victoria.

Humphry Mostyn, returning officer for Vancouver Centre for the federal election Oct. 30, said today that due to a shortage of applicants in that city, he had to hire "anybody" for the job.

As a result, he said, he is receiving phone calls from people complaining about "weirdos" doing the enumeration.

"One woman shut her door in a kid's face, refusing to give him any information," he said.

Mrs. Eleanor Allan, election clerk at the Victoria returning office, said she hasn't had any complaints about the appearance of the enumerators.

"But we'd like to hear about them, because it's our aim to please the elector," she said.

It may sound like a theatre restriction, but a club for mature students only is being established at the University of Victoria.

The club, for students 24 years and older, will hold its first meeting at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in room 203 of Lansdowne College.

Topics like programming, financial aid, day-care centres and university affairs will be discussed. Part-time and full-time graduates and undergraduates are welcome.

Manager to Seek Socred Nomination

A 30-year-old television electronics firm manager, Bernard Wauthy, announced today he will seek the Victoria Social Credit nomination in the Oct. 30 federal election.

Nominating meeting will be held Thursday at 8 p.m. at Quadra Elementary School, Finlayson Rd. Wauthy is the only Socred who has indicated he will seek the nomination.

He was on the board of trustees of St. Andrew's Cathedral and St. Patrick's Roman Catholic Church. He is alos involved in soccer and baseball circles.

Esquimalt-Saanich Social Credit Association will hold its nominating meeting next Wednesday night, Sept. 20 at 8 p.m. in the Ingraham Hotel.

Former provincial MLA's, John Tisdalle and Herb Bruch will contest the nomination.

Caouette Here On Sept. 22

Real Caouette, leader of the national Social Credit Party will be in Victoria, Friday, Sept. 22 and will address a public meeting.

In making the announcement today, local organizers could not say where or what time Caouette would be speaking, saying final arrangements will be made later this week.

ECOLOGY SLATE?

A group of North Saanich residents who describe themselves as "conservationists," took action Tuesday to fight for seats on North Saanich council in the December municipal elections.

The meeting at Holy Trinity Church in Pat Bay was chaired by Dr. Ken Martin and attended by 30 persons including Mayor Trevor Davis and Ald. Paul Grieve.

The three council seats which will be contested this December are held by Aldermen Doug Boon, George Cumpston and George Aylard. There has been no indication yet that any of these members intend to step down.

Cumpston and Aylard both said today that it is too early to make election decisions. Boon could not be reached for comment.

Main election issue, according to those at Tuesday's meeting, is the struggle to preserve the rural character of North Saanich amid increasing pressure from developers.

Those elected to a nominating committee from which three candidates will be chosen include John Lapham, Dick Thuillier, Gill Soellner, William Kierans, Richard Kirk, Ted Planta, G. R. L. Warren, Ted Radcliff, J. V. Smith and Dr. Ken Martin.

He Interprets Mother Nature

A wildlife specialist who originated British Columbia's park naturalist programs and nature houses has been appointed to the new position of assistant director of the Provincial Museum.

York Edwards, 47, says the new position will be his first direct involvement in museum work, but he has been "on the fringes" all his life.

"When I was 12 years old the people at Royal Ontario Museum in Toronto were my heroes. They used to get sick of me coming around all the time. I've been closely interested in museums ever since."

Edwards graduated from the University of Toronto in forestry and then went on to get his MA in zoology from UBC.

He began his career as a wildlife researcher with the B.C. parks branch and in 1959 initiated the idea of nature houses in provincial parks.

"The idea," Edwards says, "was to use the interpretive approach to bring nature to people who are so often unaware of what it has to offer."

Edwards said the point of nature houses is to use displays to interest people into going out and exploring wild life for themselves.

In 1967 Edwards took his interpretive program to Ottawa, where, as a staff specialist in the Canadian Wildlife Services Branch, he began a program to establish wildlife refuges across the country.

The first centre is already in full swing at Wye Marsh, north of Toronto, where busloads of urban dwellers, especially school children, arrive daily for ecology tours and talks.

Edwards, who assumed his new position last week, says he hopes to work the "ecology story" into museum displays:

"Ecology is simply a basic part of our past . . . and the past is all we really have.

"The chief cultural claim of the B.C. coast is our Indian heritage, and we're lucky we've been able to preserve so much of the arts and culture."

Edwards said he felt the museum had the potential to be the best in Canada. Besides our great Indian heritage, he said, we have a good museum building and an excellent, enthusiastic staff.

As assistant director, Edwards said he will be delegated some of the functions assumed in the past by museum director Bristol Foster.

"I hope," he said, "that I may be co-ordinating some of the new exhibits."

Edwards is also known for his book, The Mountain Barrier, an ecological study of the B.C. interior, part of McClelland and Stewart's Natural Science of Canada Illustrated series.

DETOUR REROUTES FISHING BUSINESS

COWICHAN BAY — Business in the Cowichan Bay area is being killed due to a detour sign to build sewers on the waterfront claim businessmen.

Fish are in the bay, they say, but not the fishermen. The bay businessmen feel that the detour barrier three quarters of a mile south of the bay stating "local traffic only" is driving out-of-town fishermen away.

The detour sign has been on the Cowichan Bay Road for a week and construction is expected to continue on the sewer laterals for several more weeks.

Doug Allen, owner of the Bayshore Marina, said the detour sign has killed business as many of the fishermen who come to the Bay use the south road.

LAMBERT

"Business has absolutely dried up," he said. "Normally August is the best money but we should still have a pretty good business here. It's a shame to see the fishing so good and no one here."

Allen said the spring salmon run this year is one of the best he can remember.

"There are more springs out there than I have ever seen at any one time," he said.

Peter Lambert, owner of the Anchor Marina, said he can't understand why a detour sign would be placed there, especially when traffic can get through from the other end.

Traffic coming from the south can reach the bay waterfront without meeting any construction activity, which is at the north end of the business section.

The sign is removed at five each evening and also on weekends.

Board Approves Hall, School Shift to End

DUNCAN — The shift at the Crofton Elementary School will be removed if the community association there agrees to rent its hall for a $800 settlement for a 10-month period, the school board decided Monday evening.

Cowichan School District Trustees made the decision after being advised by Maintenance Supervisor George Routley that between $550 to $600 would have to be spent to upgrade the hall's dining room before it would be suitable for a classroom.

He advised trustees that the lighting in the room is "hopelessly inadequate and creates a lot of shadows. It has to be updated. The wiring in that portion of the building does not apparently meet the current codes. There is no adequate shelving space and no chalk or tack boards. The fire exits are not adequate and in addition we had a report previously that the lavatories are not acceptable under the public health authorities for continued basis."

Routley's $600 estimate for renovations does not include improvements to the community hall's lavatories because trustees agreed that the students could use the school's facilities that are immediately adjacent.

The discussion of removing the shifts of grade six and seven students at the school was introduced at the meeting by five Crofton residents, who were representing more than 50 concerned parents. They feel Crofton always gets "the short end of the stick."

The parents called a meeting last Wednesday and agreed to ask the school board to rent the community hall's dining room rather than have the students remain on shift. At that time they were advised the shift is only temporary until a four-classroom pod, which is currently under construction, can be completed. Board officials hope it will be ready for use by Easter.

The main complaint by many parents is that 28 of the students were on shift last year as grade six students.

Mel Schmidt, spokesman for the group Monday evening as well as chairman of the community association, said the hall's dining room could be rented for $70 a month.

School trustees are hoping that the association will see fit to have the required renovations offset a rental charge because the changes will mean improvements to the hall.

A decision will be made at the association's general meeting in Crofton Thursday evening.

Trustees have also agreed to look into renting the Anglican Church hall in Crofton for kindergarten children rather than having them transported by parents to the Westholme school three miles away.

The only trustee to disagree with the change is Dave Haywood who feels kindergarten is a "convenience rather than a necessity.

"I doubt if there are less than one or two per cent of the kindergarten students that live within walking distance of their school."

Haywood said the problem will be alleviated at Easter with the completion of the new pod because kindergarten facilities are included in the plans.

Hog Fuel Dump Denied

The provincial government's land use committee has turned down a request by Doman Industries Ltd. of Duncan to dump hog fuel at its Quamichan site.

The decision was carried in a cabinet order released Tuesday, and follows a public hearing on the matter June 15.

BUS BOOST LIKELY

DUNCAN — Two more buses may be added to the Cowichan School Districts fleet, trustees decided Monday.

The additional buses, which would bring the fleet up to 12 large and two smaller buses, are to supply transportation to Chemainus students. The students are currently transported by a local company on a contract basis which expires at the end of December.

Rather than renew the contract trustees feel using their own buses would make the burden lighter, Transportation chairman Lorne Campbell said the district should either completely contract busing or go completely owner-operator.

Trustees feel they should receive financing assistance for the purchase of the buses from the Department of Education because the need is a direct result of the amalgamation of Chemainus into the school district at the beginning of August.

Campbell said that all the present buses in the district are operating at a maximum carrying capacity.

Chess to Fill Winter Nights

DUNCAN — Chess has come to the Cowichan School District's Adult Education classes.

Enthusiasts are encouraged to attend classes at the Cowichan Senior Secondary School each Monday and Thursday evening.

Bill Novis, one of the instructors, feels that the general public is taking more interest in the ancient game. Novis said there have always been small chess groups in the city but they have had little contact with each other in the past.

Angry Wife Gives Bruin Headache

When a scavenging bear keeps dropping in for a sniff around the garbage cans, any housewife can reasonably be expected to lose her cool.

But when the questing quadruped comes prowling while her toddler son is playing in the yard, it's enough to make a woman hopping mad.

At least, it is if you happen to be Mrs. Laura Betts, you've no fear of animals and you happen to live in an isolated logging community in northern Vancouver Island where help may not be too readily at hand.

It took several blows for the bear to get the message but he finally did and went on his way, with a headache for his trouble.

The incident made headlines in the little news sheet published in Mahatta River, north of Port Alice, where Laura's husband works, and she also mentioned it in a letter to her mother, Mrs. Lillian Erwin, of 1913 Jerome Road, Victoria.

Mrs. Erwin said the bear in question had been a nuisance for some time. On that particular day her daughter caught him trying to get into the yard — "through the gate, yet" — where 16-month-old Chad was playing.

"She became so angry she just grabbed the nearest thing to hand and started to beat him over the head. He took off but she still chased him."

As word of the incident spread through the community men cam to help in tracking the animal which was finally shot, Mrs. Erwin said.

She said her son-in-law was upset at the risk his wife had taken, particularly as the bear had foam around its mouth.

"If it had been me I would have grabbed the child and run like heck," Mrs. Erwin said. "But Laura's like that — very impulsive."

Quaalude Joins Drugs On Street Sellers' List

WASHINGTON (WP) — In some circles, Quaalude, a trade name for the depressant Methaqualone, is being passed around instead of marijuana.

A prescription drug, it is becoming increasingly fashionable in major cities.

"We're looking at it now with a view to putting it under control," said Robert J. Rosthal, deputy chief counsel of the Bureau of Narcotics and Dangerous Drugs (BNDD). "Its use is becoming very widespread.

"I first heard of it last March at an American Bar Association meeting on dangerous drugs. People were saying, 'Hey, we've got a new one for you.'"

Physicians prescribe the drug as a sleeping aid in 150 and 300 mg. pills or in 75 mg. doses as a tranquilizer.

VARIED DIVERSIONS

"Undoubtedly there are diversions at all levels," says Rosthal, "manufacturing, wholesale and retail."

In addition to Quaalude, Methaqualone is marketed as Parest by Parke-Davis, Optimil by Wallace Pharmaceuticals and Sopor by Arnar-Stone.

Rosthal expects that they will be placed under the same controls applied to amphetamines under the Drug Abuse Act of 1970. This would mean manufacture and distribution would be restricted and recorded.

"The law requires a painstaking survey so it will be a little while before controls go into effect," Rosthal reported.

Some heavy users of the drug say it makes them relaxed and calm while still enabling them to be agile and mobile. Others who have overused it report muscular tension and agitation.

Quaalude, one of the most sought after of the Methaqualone products, was introduced in 1966 by William H. Rorer, Inc.

BLACK MARKET

C. M. McCallister, the company's executive vice-president, says, "We're in business to produce quality drugs for those who need them. There are millions of people in this country with sleeping problems. But we're damn concerned about any misuse. If 100 tablets get diverted into misuse, that's 100 too many."

One hundred 300 mg. Quaaludes sell for $5.50 wholesale and about $11 on the legitimate retail market. In the New York area, 100 of the 300 mg. pills can be had on the black market for about $50.

Rosthal said he had received reports of Methaqualone abuse from both prosecuting and defence attorneys as well as individual citizens.

Market Mission

REGINA (CP) A farmers' marketing mission will visit Southeast Asia in October to examine market conditions and promote goodwill between prairie farmers and the overseas customers.

Alan Coulter, a director of the Palliser Wheat Growers Association, said Tuesday the mission will be known as the Canadian Grain Producer Mission. It will visit Japan, South Korea, Hong Kong, the Phillipines, Malaysia and Singapore.

Company One Opens Season at Open Space

SEASON-ENDING ROMP is enjoyed by two Vancouver teenagers. Beach, littered with sun-bathers for past two months, now is an empty runway as summer visitors pull out en masse.

Company One, Victoria's improvisational theatre company which thrilled audiences across Canada in its recent national tour, will open a second season Sept. 30 with a series of weekend performances at Open Space.

Under the direction of Carl Hare, the 14 company members form a non-profit, charitable society to present workshops and events to groups in the community.

It represents the work of a company searching for ways in which it can make the most intimate contact with its audiences, using materials with which that audience can relate most deeply.

Playing to school and church groups, and often to young children, the company varies its style and subject matter in an attempt to find the means to express the ideas and concerns of their audience.

Small theatre companies are becoming popular in Canada, but Company One's improvisational community approach give them a uniqueness and fresh approach which won them praise across the country on their three-month tour last spring.

The company was formed in May, 1971, with an Opportunities for Youth grant, and has since been financed by a $30,000 local initiatives grant which expires at the end of September. Additional grants have been applied for.

St. George's Parish Church is the group's rehearsal hall and members have been training 12 hours a day in preparation for the new season.

Most of their repertoire developed from suggestions by local groups and individuals.

"Mary," for example, one of their most successful theatrical productions, grew out of a suggestion by a group of Catholic sisters. It explores the emotions of Mary Magdalene at the tomb of Jesus between the time of the crucifixion and Easter morning.

After each performance the cast talks informally with the audience and from their comments and questions the play may change or evolve further. "Mary" has been revised seven times.

Simplicity and freedom seem to be the key to the company's success. As critic Christopher Dafoe described them:

"Company One work beautifully together, creating small flowers of delight out of words, gestures and simple emotions."

The weekend performances at Open Space will include Nightplay, a theatre event which relates most closely to the audience. Improvisations and theatre games are played as the actors create scenes based on situations and themes supplied by the audience.

Tale Theatre will be the other major event in the Open Space program, as the company enters into the ancient tradition of story-telling. Tales are related in the third person as the company acts them out in the first.

Three of the tales are based on West Coast Salish Indian legends and were suggested by the Victoria Public Library in conjunction with Young Canada Book Week.

Besides the open Space series, the company will be giving school and church performances throughout the year, will tour to Vancouver and up-Island, are planning a full-scale production on the beginnings of Canada and the building of the CPR, and will be off on another Canadian tour next spring.

Tickets for the Open Space performances are $2 and are available from Open Space or Company One, 2580 Maynard St. (477-9544). The programs will be every weekend from Sept. 30 to Oct. 28.

Cut Jobless Or Step Aside, CLC Tells Govt.

EDMONTON (CP) — Donald MacDonald, president of the 1.7-million-member Canadian Labor Congress, says the government should put an end to unemployment "or step aside for those who will do the job."

MacDonald was here to address the Canadian conference of the International Union of Operating Engineers today, and summed up what he termed the staggering problems facing the country.:

"Technological change and the increasingly impersonal computerized society it represents, attacks on personal freedoms by an ever-growing government bureaucracy, and intolerably high unemployment coupled with continuing inflation that an idea-bankrupt government is not able to cope with."

MacDonald said that instead of taking effective steps to curb unemployment, the government finds "novel ways to calculate and interpret our unemployment rates."

"Juggling and misinterpreting statistics in the vain hope that the problem will be hidden in a smokescreen of data and meaningless jargon would seem the only official answer to a very real human problem."

Spaceship Earth Isn't—Ecologist

BANFF, Alta. (CP) — Too many people believe technology will enable man to live in an entirely artificial environment, Dr. Donald J. Kuenen of the Netherlands said Tuesday.

"They do not realize that the fact that three astronauts can live for a few weeks in a space capsule does not mean that 3½ billion people can do the same on earth."

Dr. Kuenen, general director of the Research Institute for Nature Management in the Netherlands, made the remarks in a paper presented to a technical session of the triennial convention of the International Union for the Conservation of Nature and Natural Resources.

"For quite a long time . . . we will need plants for food production," said Kuenen, also chairman of the union's commission on ecology.

All kinds of plants and animals must be reserved for the purposes of biological control, domestication experiments, gene pools, pharmaceutical products and the scientific study of the living world, he said.

'Further technological developments are necessary in many areas, but we must not make the same mistakes that have been made elsewhere, or destroy the potentialities of the environment.

"Technologically - advanced countries must reorganize their land use so as to restore divtrsity wherever possible . . . diversity must be safeguarded to leave the options open for meaningful future decisions."

Delegates, representing more than 80 countries, also were told that it would be immoral to stop developing countries from building basic industries just because they may cause some pollution.

James A. Lee of the International Bank of Reconstruction and Development in Washington, D. C., said the only cure for poverty is development which cannot, and should not, be stopped.

Evidence Refused

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Defence lawyer William Kunstler has been turned down on a motion to introduce into evidence the personnel records of two policemen involved in a fatal struggle last March with five Onondaga Indians.

One of the Indians, Leroy Shenandoah, 34, was killed and the other four whom Kunstler is representing were charged with assault.

OTTAWA — The National Research Council of Canada and the Academy of Sciences of the U.S.S.R. have signed a new two-year agreement on scientific co-operation.

The agreement, signed by NRC President Dr. W. G. Schneider and Academy of Sciences of the U.S.S.R President Dr. M. V. Keldysh in Moscow Tuesday, covers the exchange of visiting scientists from the two countries and the planning of jointly-sponsored scientific meetings and scientific research by the two countries.

It falls within the framework of the General Exchange Agreement signed by Canada and Russia on Oct. 20, 1971. Under the agreement, countries will conduct annual exchanges of scientists on a reciprocal basis.

In one type of exchange, three eminent scientists from each country will visit for periods of up to one month to present lectures, conduct seminars and familiarize themselves with research on various problems of science.

Visits of scientists for periods of not less than three months, to do research, also are covered
